Danes Still 'Hosts' to Germans

210,000-Hitler-Dumped
Refugees Are Postwar Problem to Denmark

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Almost a year and a half after the Nazi capitulation, little Denmark still has among its postwar problems the big job of taking care of 210,000 refugees whom Hitler dumped on the country between February and May, 1945, despite Danish protests.

A pretty poor lot, 96 percent of these German women, old men and children are from rural areas in Eastern Germany now held by the Russians, and the Moscow mentality is the chief reason why the Danes for so long have been burdened with these German hordes. They represent more than five percent of Denmark's population. If the United States were afflicted with German refugees in the same proportion, we would have 7,000,000 of them on our hands.

Denmark's unwanted and undesirable Germans are costing the little country more than $50,000,000 a year, which is three percent of the country's total national income and 20 percent of its present annual budget. That is more than the Danes are spending on education and other cultural activities for themselves.

This is a heavy extra burden that we are not prepared to shoulder for long," the Danish Foreign Minister, Gustav Basmussen, has said. "But quite apart from the financial cost I should like to make it clear that it is quite un-

100-Mile-an-Hour Gulf Storm Roars Toward South Florida

Brunt of Blow Expected Today

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 6.—(UP)—A tremendous and growing hurricane carrying air blasts up to 100 miles an hour whirled up toward Florida from the lower Gulf of Mexico Sunday night and the entire southern shoreline of the resort State battered down to ride out the winds.

The hurricane had doubled in intensity within eight hours. It posed such a threat to Florida's long, open coast that the Hurricane Warning Service issued three special bulletins during the day to warn vessels, residents and property owners in its path.

Hurricane signals fluttered up at all weather stations across Southern Florida and along the Florida Keys. Full brunt of the tropical hurricane was expected to be felt in that area Monday.

State Highway Patrol cars drove along the Overseas Highway stretching across the Keys to Key West, warning all residents to evacuate. It was in that area that a settlement of Government workers was wiped out in a disastrous hurricane back in the 20s.

Commanders of the Seventh Coast Guard District, ordered the Coast Guard's "hurricane plan" in effect at all stations along the Florida Keys, and along the West Florida Coast.

Commanding officers of Army and Navy installations in South Florida called in all their personnel for emergency duty. Also air stations called in their night flying personnel to clear planes of the danger zone. Military leaves were being canceled effective at 6 a. m. Monday.

All disaster and rescue units were mobilized in the Keys and South Florida. Army and Navy aircraft prepared to evacuate planes and personnel. Red Cross shelters were set up in the Miami area under a long-practiced plan to care for refugees from down the coast and the islands.

The storm developed in the Yucatan Channel and generated winds in its center already were churning at a 50-mile rate when the Warning Service got out its first bulletin at 8 a. m. (EST). By 1 p. m. the storm was moving northward at 10 miles an hour.

Officials of the Civil Aeronautics Authority maintained close checks on the hurricane sweeping toward Southern Florida last night in preparation for a possible evacuation of all commercial and military planes from the area, the CAA here revealed.

With winds up to 78 miles an hour—already greater than the minimum hurricane force of 75 miles an hour.

In its third bulletin, the Warning Service said the hurricane carried winds from 90 to 100 miles an hour near the center, as gauged by reconnaissance planes skirting the edge of the twisting mass of troubled air.

The center of the storm was placed at this time about 60 miles off the western tip of Cuba in the Yucatan Channel. It was indicated it was blowing across the narrow, flat western tip of Cuba and barreling northeastward across the Gulf toward Florida.

Winds will increase over the Florida Keys Monday forenoon "probably reaching hurricane force in the afternoon and extending northward on the West Coast," the 5 p. m. advisory said. "Hoist hurricane warnings at 5 p. m. (EST) from Key Largo southward over the Florida Keys and northward on the West Florida coast to Fort Myers. Hoist northeast storm warnings from Key Largo southward over the Florida Peninsula toward the Florida Peninsula."

Ex-Solons In Line for Pensions

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Georgia's three House members who lost their seats in the Democratic primaries are eligible for retirement benefits under the Congressional Reorganization Bill passed last August.

To obtain pensions, however, they must pay six percent of their base salaries for at least the last five years into the Federal Retirement Fund—and be 62 years of age. To qualify one must have been a representative or senator a minimum of six years.

The Georgians, outgoing because of defeat within the overwhelmingly powerful Democratic Party in their State, are: Reps. Malcolm C. Tarver, Dalton; Hugh Peterson, Savannah, and John Gibson, Douglas.

Peterson, 48, and Gibson, 53, would have to wait several years before they could begin collecting, although they could qualify for pensions from 62 to death by paying in $2,674—six percent for the last five years. By paying the same percentage for their full congressional service each could gain larger benefits.

The veteran Tarver, defeated after 10 consecutive two-year terms, does not list his age in the Congressional Directory. If, however, he is 62 he could pay in the $2,674 and become eligible for $4,275 a year for the rest of his life.

By paying $11,243 to cover his full 20 years, he could qualify for $4,958 annually.

Gibson, who came to Congress in 1935, could make the five-year payment and be eligible for $2,727 yearly when he gets to be 62, or could pay in $6,105 and receive $3,000.

Carl Vinson, who became a Representative Jan. 3, 1941, barely gets under the six-year requirement. For $2,674 he could get $1,465 or for $3,108 get $1,500 after his 62nd birthday.

Every Georgia member of Congress, except Rep. Helen Douglas Mankin, of Atlanta, can qualify under service retirement features of the Reorganization Act, which also boosts pay and expense allowances for each to $15,000 annually. Mrs. Mankin has served only one term, while the others run on up to Rep. Carl Vinson's 17 consecutive terms.

JOURNEY'S END—The U. S. Army's Superfort Dreamboat is shown here as it ended its long flight over the north polar cap of the globe from Honolulu to Cairo, Egypt. It landed early Sunday after bucking high storm winds over the Mediterranean Sea.

B-29 Dreamboat 'Pole Vaults' Safely---Honolulu to Cairo

CAIRO, Oct. 6.—(AP)—The Pacusan Dreamboat, tireless Superfortress of the U. S. Army Air Forces, was declared by its grizzled commander Sunday to have demonstrated in its arctic flight from Honolulu to Egypt that it could do its job in "defending the United States over any part of the world."

The giant Boeing B-29 touched Payne Field in the desert outside Cairo at 9:57 a. m. Egyptian Time (2:57 a. m. EST) after flying 9,500 nautical miles, or 10,925 statute miles, testing equipment in Polar regions which military men consider the aerial crossroads of any future war.

The nonstop flight, one of the longest in history but not a record, had been accomplished in atrocious weather in slightly more than 39 1/2 hours.

The Dreamboat had left only 400 of the 13,000 gallons of gasoline it had to climb high above the clouds in the Pacific skies at 11:21 a. m. EST Friday.

Col. C. S. (Bill) Irvine, of St. Paul, Neb., the cigar-smoking pilot and Commander, praised highly his craft and crew of nine.

The Dreamboat averaged 240 nautical miles an hour. Much of its flight was at four-mile altitudes, and the climbing consumed large quantities of the 77.31 pounds of gasoline. Some of the equipment was tested at speeds of more than 300 miles an hour.

The plane had left its deicing equipment a Hawaii to make space for five more tons of gasoline. It had to climb high above Arctic storms and icing conditions over Greenland and the Alps, and then had to ride out a final thunderstorm over the Mediterranean.

Irvine, Deputy Chief of Staff to Lt. Gen. Ennis Whitehead's U. S. Army Air Forces in Tokyo, said it was the "worst weather route."

They listened quietly while M. E. Thompson, Lt. Governor-Nominate of Georgia, said Bill Arp had the right philosophy of life.

"He laughed and made other people laugh with him," Thompson said. "Sometimes I think the trouble with us today is there is too much seriousness."

Mayor Jesse A. Richardson, of Lawrenceville, accepted the marker on behalf of the city, and Mrs. James B. Green, of the Baron DeKalb Chapter of the DAR, of Decatur, delivered the dedicatory prayer.

Flanigan told of Arp returning home to manage the country store because of his father's illness, of his marriage to the former Miss Mary Octavia Hutchins, of Lawrenceville, and of the friendly, humorous, homespun letters he wrote in The Constitution during the 80s and 90s, along with other famous Georgia writers such as Sarge Plunkett, Joel Chandler Harris, Henry Grady and Frank L. Stanton.

Mrs. W. C. Robinson, Regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution, speaking for the DAR, expressed her appreciation for having a part in the dedication of the marker.

"Today is a great day for Lawrenceville," she said. "It is for us the living, to pay tribute to the great men of the past. It is part of the work of the DAR, for soon we too shall be recorded in history."

A gentle breeze whipped the early fall leaves around the marker into whirling flurry; the old-timers murmured among themselves. They told the younger people how they used to wait for The Weekly Constitution to arrive to read Bill Arp's column, and of their association with him.

Traffic Crashes Kill 5, Injure 24 In Weekend Georgia Accidents

Five persons were killed and 24 injured throughout the State in 24 week-end traffic accidents. Twenty-two accidents were in Atlanta.

Killed were Miss Betty Brown, 17, of Adamsville Drive, in a collision between a car and a truck on Gordon Road; Clem Mulkey, 31, and Earl Clark, 17, who likewise died in an automobile-truck collision six miles east of Ellijay.

Mrs. Louise Brock Wiley, 25, of McCormick, S. C., also was killed in a collision eight miles north of Savannah, and Lovick M. Twigg, Jr., 21, of Gainesville, was fatally injured in a jeep accident five miles north of Gainesville.

According to Fulton County Patrolmen A. E. Hughes and L. C. Clay, Miss Brown was riding in a car driven by Hollis B. Brown, 18, of 632 Peeples St., S. W., no relation, who, police said, is being held without bond on charges of murder, speeding and reckless driving.

Police said Brown's car collided head-on with a truck driven by John White, 56, of Carrollton, and occupied also by Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Cook, of Carrollton. Brown, White and the Cooks were treated at Grady Hospital for cuts and bruises.

Sgt. V. K. Worthing, of the Carrollton State Highway Patrol office, said Mulkey and Clark died when their vehicles collided early yesterday causing the truck to turn over several times. Both vehicles were demolished. In the truck with Clark was James Garland, 17, of Ralston, who suffered a brain concussion. Riding in the car with Mulkey was Garfield Cochran, 23, of Douglasville, who suffered cuts and bruises.

Mrs. Wiley was killed when the automobile in which she was riding collided with another car at an intersection on the Coastal Highway. Injured were her husband, Ernest Wiley, 26, and an occupant of the second car, James E. Timmons.

The State Highway Patrol said Twigg was killed when a jeep in which he was riding with five other persons ran off the New Bridge Road and turned over, crushing Twigg beneath. No one else was injured in the accident.

In Atlanta, 16 persons were injured in 10 accidents throughout the City, and police recorded 12.

Proud Forest Ancients Of Georgia Cut Down

By BILL BORING
Constitution Staff Writer.

BLUE RIDGE, Oct. 6.—They're harvesting Georgia's forest primeval—the towering poplars, hemlocks, oaks and walnuts of the Blue Ridge Mountains. They're the mighty hardwoods which have beautified these high mountains and deep valleys since the day of the Indians.

They're the stately trees which were their age with dignity and grace. Some are nearly as tall as an Atlanta skyscraper and as round as you are high.

You've never seen trees just like them unless you saw them in the Blue Ridge range.

Their death knell was sounded by the unprecedented demand for lumber. They will be fashioned into fine furniture and laid out into hardwood floors for new homes of the Nation.

Their mountain home is the Chattahoochee National Forest. The government decided to let the older trees go because of the shortage of lumber.

Here's how the government works it: Foresters go through the mountains putting a paint mark of red on trees which might be cut. Then certain tracts of the forest are auctioned off to the highest bidder.

Pravda Raps Utterances Of Byrnes

MOSCOW, Oct. 6.—(UP)—Pravda, the newspaper of the Communist Party, Sunday called Secretary of State Byrnes the "protector of Germany" and rejected both his Stuttgart, Germany, speech of Sept. 6 and his speech before the American Club in Paris last Thursday.

Pravda's commentary was written by Evfent Zhukov. It was accompanied by a 90-line interpretative summary of his Paris speech by the Tass Agency.

Zhukov said the Paris speech was made by Byrnes to allay the fears aroused in France by his Stuttgart speech, in which "he spoke out quite definitely in favor of the speediest restoration of Germany's industrial potential without any serious guarantees against the possible transformation of Germany into a base for new aggression."

Finally in the same (Stuttgart) speech, speaking in the role of the American protector of Germany, Byrnes unequivocally doubted the stability of Poland's Western frontiers.

He said there "was nothing" new in Byrnes' Paris speech about his original 40-year, four-power treaty plan to disarm Germany. Byrnes' renewed offer of such a treaty, Zhukov asserted, contained no essential guarantees and was intended only to convince the French that the treaty draft contained the necessary guarantees against new German aggression.

"Even if it could be supposed that the elementary requirements of disarmament have not yet been carried out in the Western zones, it would not take the American Military Administration 40 years to do so," he said.

He said that while Winston Churchill frankly proposes a United States of Europe under the flag of "all is forgiven," Byrnes put forward the same idea more carefully, delicately and subtly.

Tass Hears U. S., Korean Police 'Persecute' Reds

MOSCOW, Oct. 6.—(UP)—A Tass dispatch from Genzan, Korea, based on "information received here" said that mass arrests of leading workers in prominent parties and organizations were proceeding in cities and villages in Southern Korea.

The dispatch said that American and Korean police were especially brutal in the persecution of Communists. The Southern Koreans were captivated by the land reform, nationalization, food, labor and elections measures carried on in the Soviet zone of Northern Korea.

A BRUSH WITH DEATH—AND RETREADS—City Patrolmen George Wallace and J. C. Elrod narrowly escaped death last week when the retreads ran off the two front tires of the patrol car they were driving in a rapid chase. The right tire blew off the rim, hurling the auto over a steep embankment. Patrolman E. C. Mitchell examines a section of the rotted retread. New tires are needed on police cars.

Rotted Retread Blamed In Wreck of Patrol Car

By KEELER McCARTNEY

In the Detective Bureau of the Atlanta Police Department a strip of rotted retread from an automobile tire is prominently displayed on the bulletin board as a grim reminder of faulty police equipment which almost cost the lives of two patrolmen last week.

The strip is part of the retread which came off both front tires of a city patrol car during a 100-mile-an-hour chase down the new Macon highway Tuesday night. One of the tires blew completely off the rim, hurling the new patrol car over a 20-foot embankment and into a creek bed 50 feet away.

Patrolman George Wallace received severe head injuries in the crash and still is reported in "fair" condition at Grady Hospital. Patrolman J. C. Elrod, who was driving, was less seriously injured.

The patrol car, a 1946 model, was demolished.

The chase began when Wallace and Elrod noticed an automobile which had been reported stolen earlier in the night going south on Georgia Avenue. They attempted to stop the car, but the driver succeeded in getting away and sped out Moreland Avenue.

City detective cars and DeKalb County patrol cars joined the chase on the Macon Highway.

The wild ride ended suddenly one mile below Conley when the tires on the lead city car came apart and the car was wrecked. Two hours later the city police picked up the stolen automobile, which had been brought back to Georgia Avenue and arrested Clarence Thacker, 18, of 372 Georgia Ave., S. E., on charges of "suspicion of larceny of automobile."

Many other city patrol cars also are equipped with often-retreaded tires.

Patrolmen point out that the tires look good from an outside examination, but are unsafe for high speeds. They have displayed the section of retread which came off the tires of the car in which Wallace and Elrod were riding as a reminder of an added danger in trying to apprehend criminals because of faulty police equipment.

Debt-Ridden Counties Florida 'Ointment Fly'

By JOHN COURIC

Constitution Staff Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Oct. 6.—Florida, last frontier State of the South, was built in a two-year boom period, which still has its financial officialdom gasping.

Last this statement be misunderstood, it must be pointed out that this is another in a series of stories about finances in State government.

This flamboyant, spruced-up Land of Sunshine is not in the condition of some of its less desirable citizens—the snappily-dressed touts of the race track who often lack two thin times to rub together.

Insider as State Government finances are concerned, Florida, which collected $153,000,000 in State taxes last year and is in excellent financial shape, better can be compared with a shoe clerk who hit a string of parlays at Hialeah and isn't quite sure what to do with the heavy cash.

POOR RELATIONS
Add one parcel of poor, debt-ridden relatives to the shoe clerk's plight.

During the boom years when Florida grew with mushroom rapidity, her Counties and Municipalities (the poor relatives in this analogy) floated bonds to pay for roads and schools needed to meet the surge of population.

The Counties had to do this if the projects were to be built, because Florida's State Constitution prohibits the State itself from contracting a debt.

New Florida's State Government vaults figuratively are overflowing and the State Tax Collectors almost have had to resort to wheelbarrows to bring in present revenue collections.

FLORIDA SITUATION
And so this situation faces Florida: There is a $45,000,000 surplus in the general revenue fund alone, showing one side of the financial picture. On the other side, rich Florida is faced with a road fund debt, owed by the Counties, which amounts to a net $86,000,000. This is being paid off by the State at a high interest rate under a long-range program.

Florida officials still insist they have not assumed this debt, but have only promised to pay it for the Counties by allotting two cents out of every seven collected as tax on each gallon of gasoline sold.

These bonds, floated in the roaring twenties and refinanced during the thirties, cannot be recalled and continue as a liability which cuts a good hunk out of the taxpayers' money.

In addition, State financiers all ways have to bear in mind that the counties and municipalities—many of them in shaky financial shape—have other bond issues, including school debts which have not been paid.

INSTALLMENT PLAN

However, Florida is paying one of these debts on the installment plan under what appears to be sound financing under the circumstances. In addition, the State is returning to the Counties approximately $9,000,000 a year to help pay for County Government.

Florida is a nation to itself in many respects when it is compared with other Southern States, particularly Georgia. Compared with Georgia, its tax structure is as dissimilar as its economy. Georgia has taxes which Florida does not need, and Florida has taxes which Georgia could not use.

As a basis for what comparison there is, it must be remembered that Florida last fiscal year collected about $153,000,000 compared with Georgia's $81,000,000.

The State spent $73,000,000 of the $100,000,000 collected for its general revenue fund (one of the five remaining funds in Florida now that the State has partially revised its archaic accounting system, which at one time called for 270 separate funds).

GAS TAX RECEIPTS
Receipts from the seven cents a gallon tax on gasoline brought in $31,575,000 compared with $27,000,000 in Georgia, despite the fact that Georgia only charges six cents a gallon tax.

The alcoholic and malt beverage tax in Florida brought in $22,790,653 compared with about $15,500,000 in Georgia, while the cigarette tax in Florida amounted to $10,245,000 compared with Georgia's tax in cigars and cigarettes which brought in $6,848,000.

Since cigar making is one of the big industries in Florida, this State does not have a "selective sales" tax on that product. Motor vehicle license tags in Florida range from $5 for Model T Fords to $25 for the largest passenger cars. In Florida, the tags brought in $12,000,000 compared with $2,760,000 in Georgia.

Parimutuel taxes, the State's levy to permit the legalizing of gambling on horse racing, dog racing and jai lai totaled $15,000,000 in taxes last fiscal year, half as much as was received in all the other years of legalized gambling since 1931.

GAMBLING TAX
Such a tax is impossible in Georgia. The State Legislature was only able to push it through in Florida by promising it all to the 67 counties of the State. Since then the taxes on the gambling events have been increased, and this additional revenue is retained by the State.

In many counties the gambling tax revenue forms the major portion of county government income. Insurance premium taxes in Florida yielded about $1,733,000, compared with Georgia's $2,235,591 in Georgia.

Florida's inventory and retail store license tax is a mild form of sales tax—in disguise. An annual license fee of $10 is charged for each single store and ranges up to $400 for each store in a national chain of 50 or more. In addition, a tax of $10 on each $1,000 worth of stock on hand at the store's annual inventory is charged. This tax produced about $1,300,000.

This is in comparison with Georgia's chain store tax alone which amounted to $178,000 last fiscal year.

INVENTORY TAX
Florida's inventory tax is collected under a terrific overhead, since auditors must check the inventory of each store. Political observers in the State Capitol here predict that this tax may be abolished shortly.

As part of its build-up to entice wealthy persons to settle in this State, Florida has no inheritance tax. However, the State is authorized to accept 80 percent of inheritance taxes collected by the Federal Government under the 1926 rate and turned over to the State. This amount otherwise would revert to the Federal Treasury. It is a fluctuating amount, which last year totaled $1,095,000, compared with Georgia's $545,133.

The State has no tax on real or personal property, but does levy a one-mill tax on all intangible property, such as money, bonds and taxes. Florida's levy limits this tax to two mills. This tax brought in about $2,000,000 in Florida, compared with $126,000 in Georgia.

ROAD MONEY

There are numerous minor taxes in this State, just as in Georgia, which form the balance in the amount of revenue.

When highway money is considered, Florida also is in excellent shape with a $25,000,000 road fund and surplus road money amounting to $22,000,000. Last fiscal year Florida spent $15,945,000 on road building, compared with Georgia's $24,348,000.

Georgia has a $9,000,000 surplus in road money, which is earmarked to match Federal funds.

In expenditures for some of the main services which States now give to their taxpayers, Florida for the last fiscal year shows $18,000,000 for common schools, compared with Georgia's $23,000,000; for welfare department benefits, $12,421,000 compared with $5,900,000; for public health work, $2,000,000 compared with $700,000 in Georgia for the last fiscal year and budget allotment for this fiscal year amounting to $2,100,000 in Georgia. Neither the Florida or Georgia figures include the money expended on tuberculosis hospitals.

UNIVERSITY SYSTEM

The university system, $5,000,000 compared with $4,400,000 in Georgia; various State hospitals, $2,900,000 compared with about $3,300,000 in Georgia; correctional institutions, $1,200,000 compared with about $950,000 in Georgia.

Like Georgia, Florida gives its school children free school books. It is ahead of Georgia in its program of offering scholarships to girls who will promise to teach school after graduation from college, for Florida appropriated $400,000 on this program last year.

PAVE ALL STREETS WITH CONCRETE!

because—

- 1 Every street needs a gritty, non-skid surface for the protection of motorists and pedestrians.
- 2 At night you need a pavement with high visibility.
- 3 Safety also calls for a pavement that is free from chuck holes, ruts and bumps . . . and stays that way with minimum maintenance.
- 4 You want a pavement that drains quickly . . . that is easily cleaned and stays clean . . . no depressions to catch dirt.
- 5 You want a pavement that makes the whole neighborhood look modern, prosperous, attractive.

RECORD HOP

The distance covered was short of the record set last week by the U. S. Navy patrol plane, Truculent Turtle, which flew 11,250 miles from Perth, Australia, to Columbus, Ohio. The Turtle in that flight wrestled the title from the Dreamboat itself, which previously had racked up a distance record from Guam to Washington, D. C.

The Dreamboat weighed 74 tons when it left Hawaii with its full fuel load. It was almost 15 tons overweight and was the heaviest loaded Superfortress ever to take the air. The gasoline alone weighed 33 1/2 tons.

Irvine pointed out that the North Pole route was the shortest distance to most points.

He said Gen. Spaatz, Commander of the U. S. Air Forces, had given him the idea for the flight over the Arctic by talking about having a global air force.

Irvine, who smoked so many cigars during the flight that he exhausted the fuel supply of two lighters, commented on another discovery.

"Apparently the magnetic North Pole is about 200 miles closer to the North Pole than was previously believed. We passed north of the point believed to be the magnetic North Pole deliberately to check its apparent location and its effects on magnetic compasses. In the position we crossed, our magnetic compasses pointed left towards the North Pole."

The Dreamboat's course was over part of the Pacific, Alaska, Northern Canada, Baffin Bay, Greenland, Iceland, England, France, Switzerland, Italy, the Mediterranean and Egypt. The oceans below were the Pacific, Arctic and Atlantic. The continents were North America, Europe and Africa.

Irvine said the flight proved that communications could be carried on from plane to plane and from plane to ground in the Arctic regions and that aircraft can navigate in the Arctic with highly qualified personnel.

Many members of the Dreamboat crew held key positions in the air force and their knowledge gained in the grueling flight could be applied to purchases of air force equipment, he said. The test was estimated to have cost $3,000,000.

Forced climbing to escape icing conditions along most of the route cut so heavily into the gasoline supplies that Irvine declared an emergency as the plane approached Hayne Field. The 400 gallons remaining were barely enough to "wet the bottom of our 36 cells holding 13,000 gallons when full," he said.

The plane landed smoothly, however, and the tired crew came out grinning. The Royal Aero Club of Egypt welcomed them.

Col. Irvine told of seeing weird greenish lights in the sunrise over the Arctic Saturday. He described them as the most beautiful sight he had ever witnessed. He expressed belief that the lights may have been prismatic effects of sun rays on ice particles.

The Colonel said conventional magnetic compasses were completely unreliable about 200 miles inland from the Aleutian Islands off Alaska and became reliable again only after the plane had spanned North America and was over Greenland.

Maj. N. P. Hayes, of Seneca, Mo., the navigator, guided the Dreamboat in that critical stretch by a little six pound electrical gyro, because the plane flew over undercast and beneath high clouds which made both the ground and the heavens invisible.

"My compass went round and round," Hayes said. "I got so tired looking at it that I covered it up."

Asked about the Northern Lights, Hayes said he had seen too many.

"The best Aurora we saw was in the Mediterranean when electrical discharges caused corona effects around the plane's nose," he commented.

Most of the flight was above the clouds to escape icing. Col. Irvine said the toughest leg was between Baffinland and Iceland where the Dreamboat climbed to 22,000 feet without escaping icing conditions entirely.

Most of the crew was too busy to sleep, he said, but "being the old fud in charge, I got a couple of hours."

Irvine said he did not see the British planes that were sent up to welcome the Dreamboat over England because the weather was so bad. The Superfortress at that point was well ahead of schedule.

Col. Irvine said his next trip would be to the Shepherd's Hotel in Cairo to take a bath and await further orders from his boss, Gen. Whitehead.

Others in the crew were Col. Beverly Warren, of Omaha, a pilot; Maj. J. T. Brothers, of Knoxville, Tenn., a navigator; Maj. J. R. Dalrymple, of Vero Beach, Fla., a flight engineer; R. B. Snodgrass, Boeing engineer of Seattle, Wash.; Lt. Col. F. J. Shannon, of Philadelphia, communications; Sgt. E. G. Vasse, Huntsville, Mo., Radio Operator; Maj. J. R. Kerr, of Arcadia, Cal., Aircraft Engineer, and Sgt. G. S. Fish, Appleton, Wis., an engineer.

other accidents in which no one was hurt.

Mrs. Annie Heard, 40, of 4002 North Ivy Rd., was admitted to Grady Hospital with knee, nose and head injuries. The car in which she was riding, driven, according to police, by C. L. Burnett, 27, of 12 Porter Pl., N. E., crashed into a power pole on North Avenue near Forrest Road, bounced away and struck another pole 40 feet down the road, uprooting it.

City Patrolmen H. C. Hammond and R. C. West said they had booked Burnett with drunk operating, no license, speeding, improper registration of an automobile, reckless driving and accident.

Others injured were five pedestrians who were struck. They include R. V. Holland, 58, of 898 North Highland Ave., N. E., admitted to Grady Hospital with severe head and leg injuries; Mrs. Ludie M. Warren, 35, and V. H. Garmon, 40, both of Piedmont, Ala., who told police they were hit by a bus on Broad Street near Poplar Street; Jean Curbow, 17, of 1080 Rice St., S. W., hit by a truck near her home; and Luther Warner, Negro, 60, of 174½ Auburn Ave., N. E., who was admitted to Grady after being hit on Piedmont Avenue near Auburn Avenue.

Three persons were admitted to Piedmont Hospital for observation after narrowly escaping death when their car was struck by a train at the Atlanta and West Point Railroad's belt line tracks on Glenwood Avenue. The car was demolished. The occupants were Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Clower, of Decatur, and their three-year-old daughter, Patsy.

Two soldiers were injured when their motorcycle was struck on Crumley Street. W. L. Bell, 20, of Mississippi, and C. C. Wilborn, 19, of 483 Formwalt St., S. W., each suffered arm fractures. City Patrolmen A. C. Potts and M. Y. Rutherford said charges of drunk operating and accident had been booked against John Clark, 32, Negro, of 20 Richardson St., S. E., who, they said, was driving the truck that struck the motorcycle.

Others injured in different accidents were Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Wilborn, 29, of Decatur, bruised; two-year-old Lamar Hendricks, of 672 Shelton Ave., S. W., head injuries; Cecil B. Pett, 24, of Asheville, N. C., cuts and bruises; and Bobbie Martin, 22, of Gainesville, bruises.

Adequate Service Depends on Adequate Earnings

Your Telephone Company is doing the largest volume of business in its history, yet telephone earnings continue to decline. The reason is perfectly clear. While your telephone rate has remained the same for many years, the costs of furnishing you service have increased. Wages, telephone materials, building costs, services; all have been going up so fast that—the amount of money Paid Out to provide service is increasing faster than the amount

Taken In. Actually telephone earnings today are the lowest in our history.

It is basic with any business that good service depends on reasonable earnings. To provide good telephone service and to continually improve and expand it, reasonable earnings are essential.

Rehabilitating the Disabled

"Employ the Physically Handicapped Week," enacted by Congress and proclaimed by the President, begins today.

There was a great deal of research involved in an experiment undertaken by the Civil Service Commission in 1942. It made surveys of the possible employment of the disabled and found there were nearly 6,000 kinds of jobs that could be efficiently done by disabled civilians during the war.

Since 1942 Civil Service has inaugurated employment clinics in conjunction with the Vocational Rehabilitation Departments of the various States.

Georgia leads the nation in this program. California is next and then Michigan and New York.

Georgia leads in force of number and not in ratio of population, having actually restored to working usefulness, or placed in gainful employment, 2,400 Georgians. Where before rehabilitation the disabled persons were earning $624,000, including public relief and unemployment compensation, they are now earning $3,260,000. The expense involved in the program of rehabilitation was $675,000.

Three-fourths of this cost was defrayed by Federal appropriation under which every State has opportunities equal to Georgia's.

These people have been transformed from liabilities upon the State to productive members of society.

The advantages of vocational rehabilitation are many. Responsibility is the core of rehabilitation therapy. Thus, the disabled are helped to recuperate while they serve their community as whole, useful citizens.

But until lately the responsibility of employment was voluntarily undertaken by Civil Service Commissions. Now Federal personnel has been reduced to a minimum, and responsibility for employment of these rehabilitated and trained people shifts from the Government to the private employer.

That is why we are observing "Employ the Physically Handicapped Week" from Oct. 6-12.

Every private employer owes it to himself and to his community to investigate the possibilities. Especially should every Georgian be proud of our established leadership and interested in continuing it.

The Safety Check Campaign

Presently underway in Atlanta is the three-week Safety-Check Campaign jointly sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Traffic Committee of the senior Chamber.

During the period of the Campaign, garages and filling stations throughout the city are co-operating, as are several motorists organizations. And at least one major oil company, Gulf, is simultaneously conducting a wide-scale advertising program to inform the motoring public of the dangers of mechanical defects which over-age cars have developed.

There are numerous minor adjustments which can insure additional safety in driving. A check-up costs nothing, may save lives. Have your machine gone over today. And even after indicated repairs have been made, take every precaution. It's better to be safe than sorry.

Money In Turpentine Production

One has known, of course, that naval stores have annually produced a larger and larger share of Georgia's total income. For the past 17 years, this State has led the nation. And annually, the over-all return has increased, reaching nearly $24,000,000 in 1945. It comes as something of a surprise, however, to learn that Georgia timber owners received an average of more than 65 cents a tree last year. That means that the return, per acre, is considerably higher than on what have heretofore been considered money crops. Moreover, the trees continue to grow while being worked for turpentine and lose very little of their ultimate value as lumber in the process. Georgia already produces a third of the world's supply of naval stores. But the demand and the price continue high, and there is no reason why even more Georgia landowners should not take advantage of the opportunity thus presented.

THE PULSE OF THE PUBLIC

Complexities

Editor Constitution: Simple melodies have never prevailed in great music. The simple and melodic themes of the classics are always supported by harmonious chords. It is not all there nor is it all harmony; it is a combination of the two which gives the fullness of feeling experienced upon listening to them. The simple ditties sung by the cowboy and the troubadour feel a need of this fullness in feeling.

The extremely ultramodern swing, I admit, possesses little or no tonality. But, let us keep in mind—Irving Berlin, Cole Porter, George Gershwin and all of our musicians who are carrying on the classic tradition laid by the great immortals of music. These men give the simple melodies, but always with harmonious complexities, as a background. Classic music is that which survives the test of time and is the really great music. All periods have two distinct types of music: popular and classical. Popular music is the light music with the tricky theme, unrelated harmonies and obvious discords. The music is meant to be unconventional and complex. A variety of discordant harmonies arouse the emotions and tends to make one excited and gay. It is definitely a form of relaxation from the emotions of ordinary living.

Of course the earlier centuries had their popular music sung by their troubadours and bards who played the various stringed instruments. I dare say that at times there were intentional and tricky discords in their songs. Partly on purpose and partly because the pitch wasn't exactly the correct size for a harmonic sound. The audience wanted to be gay and carefree. They wanted to hear noise from fireworks as well as from many crowds and musical instruments. But, when they left the noisy crowd and entered the theater they welcomed the feeling that they derived from the harmonious work of the great artists of their time. The simple melodies full of charm, grace and feeling. It was the rare combination of melody and harmony that gave them this feeling.

Jose Turbini, one of our best pianists, who has captured the style and rhythm of the best composers, turns out some mighty hot boogie. He knows the difference between harmony and discord, surely. There must be a definite difference between popular and classical music, also.

The emotions of war come from

The Constitution welcomes letters from its readers. They must be signed, should not exceed 200 words.

jealousy, hate, insecurity and fear, which belong to the undesirable emotions. These emotions of love, happiness, gaiety and melancholy which the creative artists feel so earnestly are certainly desirable emotions. These emotions are of two different classes and it is easier for me to believe that music and public life have no relations on the whole or in part. I firmly believe that the hen proceeds the egg. Well, pretty firmly anyway.

I wish life were simple and revealing. I want to know its secrets. You have asked questions that I would like to answer. But one above all. Is life really simple?

JOHN HUTCHINS.
Buford, Ga.

To Mitchell

Editor Constitution: Mr. Eugene D. Mitchell said in his lines about immigration that he is a seventh generation immigrant and therefore I say that he is no Indian, because the Indians are the only 100 percent Americans.

Could you tell us, Mr. Mitchell, in what capacity you were associated with this last war? If you served your country, you probably would have met overseas a lot of immigrant soldiers who fought for their new country and thousands of them died for it also. Do you know that it was Hitler's dirty business to blame everything on one particular minority? Don't speak about our Four Freedoms if you disrespect them by writing in your discriminating style. Did you hear just one out of so many examples that Mrs. Lise Meitner, the immigrant from Germany, brought the secrets about the atomic bomb with her to this country? Let's use our head when we make such radical statements.

Will of Won'ts

Editor Constitution: This negative business of strikes and paralyzing industry, affecting persons involved, other private lives, the lives of the people at large, and the prestige of the nation itself, does not seem to me to be a quality that we may ascribe to labor, but only to anarchy. It seems to set itself up to dictate what it desires by demand backed up by passive (?) action. (However, it is not "passive" when it obstructs and impedes the industry of others and tears into other lives.) Our nation being an energetic, industrious, positive nation, this is counter to all the growth we have made, and unless we are taking on the creeds of the East, Gandhi, and the spike beds, it is time we waked up.

I know laborers in a ten cent store here that were led to believe they would get $30 per week by unionizing. I understand they will ask $34 and free Wednesdays. They make their contract today. We shall see disillusionment.

Money seems to be out of line and instead of it being brought to line there are those who would follow it in its wild gallop over the hills, with their "I won'ts" to industry's demands, which brought the thought that we are in this treacherous time being subjected to this negative outlaw force, "The Will of the Won'ts."

We have travelled so fast our senses are reeling. And we conform but to robots now at the wheel. To the Will of the Won'ts, and a swifter sailing. Of uncharted seas with an uncertain keel.

The Will of the Won'ts sees a princely wage. It lessens the stress, demands of war days; Lost is its wisdom in this new-born age. Threatening a close-out to demand a raise.

With industry's gains, its anas of gold. Our nation has wealth, with prestige and power. Now drunken with courage, "so brave and so bold." It gambles with destiny's God-chosen hour.

But the Will of the Won'ts is in the saddle now. And the nation ponders with bated breath—

Questions—Where shall we go? When?—How? To Life, Progress—or Idleness, Ennui, Death?

Oh, Say, Can We See?

UNRRA will die in January. Maybe that is for the best. It is easy to say, now, that it was a mistake.

The Soviets did not participate as had been hoped, and as they had intended they would.

The reason is obvious. They didn't have it. Half of the Ukraine industrial working total is living off UNRRA food. With hunger widespread in that devastated area, being painfully rebuilt, with their own drought conditions reducing in some measure their harvest; with industrial output lagging, the Russians didn't have food or goods to contribute.

So, UNRRA was, in a sense, a failure.

That is an estimate made largely from the political viewpoint. Actually, of course, UNRRA kept millions alive, started many a nation back to industrial production. The fact that some of the goods got on the black market, that some of it was eaten in bribes and shady deals, is beside the point. Eventually it got eaten, if it was food, or worn if clothing, used if machinery.

But, UNRRA was never understood. And recipients of charity rarely feel friendship for donors. Mistake or not, there had to be an UNRRA. All the solemn, somewhat smug editorials being written about how great an error it was, are typical of a state of mind which makes difficult any planning. We have too many persons who know how to lock the door after the mare has been stolen.

Without UNRRA we would have had chaos which would make the disorder of the present seem like cosmos.

But, UNRRA will run out in January. The pity is we can't end it now.

Because, proving there had to be an UNRRA, we now know there must be a substitute.

Test Jonathan Swift once said that vision was being able to see the invisible.

What a great many Americans are seeing, and one may but hope there are enough of them so seeing, is not at all invisible.

It is this—

There are two political systems competing in the world.

Our own system we most profoundly believe to be the best one for raising the living standards of our own, or any other people.

The trouble has been that we have tried to keep a monopoly on it. It was not more than seven years ago, for instance, that those among us most dependent on the American system, savagely opposed any effort to provide the Chinese with industrial machinery and technical direction.

The Germans and the British actually, literally, had kept the economy of all Europe, and what there was in Asia, going along by supplying machinery and technology. That is what is chiefly wrong with Europe today as it struggles to recover... it lacks the German support of coal, goods, and "know-how." Russia knows that and bitterly opposes any rebuilding of German industry.

So, we are going to have a test.

Sense It will be a test between systems. It also will be a test of the common sense and ideals of this country.

Our own system of raising the standards of the world and winning nations and peoples to our side cannot prove itself the better method unless we permit it.

We can, if we really believe in free enterprise, as opposed to large concentrations of enterprise, demonstrate through the proved superiority of our institutions that we can do the better job.

We will no longer through UNRRA, come January, assist the Communistic ideal.

But, until we demonstrate that we hurriedly will replace UNRRA with an arrangement of loans to people on our side and those who want to be on our side, we can't be sure our institutions will be given a chance to prove anything but our own national blindness.

China, Greece, Italy, Austria, Turkey and Iran need help on a general scale.

There are others, of course. These are the most needy among those in Europe and the Middle East looking our way.

The Greeks cynically say we sent them a fleet and the British sent them a king. They forget, of course, that even now their government is not stable enough to say what it wants.

Our foreign policy, once UNRRA ends, must be built around the policy of demonstrating the superiority of our institutions.

The question is—will we see plainly enough?

Is Black Market To Blame for This?

For the entire year of 1945 there were 138 reported cases of undulant, or Malta, fever. For this year, 1946, practically the same number—136 to be exact—have been reported up to Sept. 28. If the same ratio is maintained for the remaining months of the year, there will be 36 more cases before Dec. 31.

These figures are from a report by the State Health Department.

There is a thought of unusual interest involved. While the Health Department does not mention it as a factor, every thoughtful observer must wonder if the increase in the disease is not attributable, in part at least, to the black market in meats.

A black market which we all know has existed and, probably, still exists. A black market of greater or less proportion is probably inevitable under any system which places a ceiling on prices and when any commodity is far short of meeting the demand.

There is no question, undulant fever, is contracted either by the drinking of infected raw milk or by handling raw meat from diseased cattle and hogs.

There, you will realize, is where the black market in meat becomes dangerous.

There have been evidences that some unscrupulous individuals have slaughtered cattle and hogs in open fields, under the shade of trees, and have then found quick market for the meat.

Such meat is, obviously, uninspected before slaughter or before sale. It is not unlikely that the cattle thus secretly killed had never been inspected by competent men. Certainly not by legitimate, authorized inspectors.

Health Department officials state that pasteurization renders milk safe by killing the germs that may lurk therein. Inspection reveals the presence of the disease in animals.

Humans Are Odd Human beings are odd creatures, anyway. patronize any black market we can find, regardless of any danger to health, in addition to our contribution thereby to that evil inflation. To say nothing of our unfairness to our fellow citizens who are just as short in available meat as we are.

When appetite urges, common sense forgets primary precautions. Remember how, during prohibition, when it was extremely rare to find any good, honest, properly aged liquor? How many people did you know who drank any kind of alcoholic concoction, any variety of bathtub gin, just to satisfy two appetites? The appetite for alcoholic beverage and the appetite for defiance of an unpopular law.

There is no question, however, we heard of poor wretches who died from drinking poisonous wood alcohol, in those days of the "noble experiment."

Men and women will drink salty sea water, when there is no fresh, when the ravages of thirst drive them near insanity. And the salt water means quick death.

There is no such excuse for those who risk health and life by eating black market meat. There is not the excuse of starvation. Other foods can be found to substitute, for a while at least, for meat.

Nor is there the impelling demand of an abnormal appetite, as in the craving of the dipsomaniac for liquor.

Of course, there is the charming science of defying a law—the law of the OPA and its ceiling prices. The delight of eating meat when legitimate sources of supply can say only, "there is no meat."

Restaurants An allied topic, inasmuch as it has to do with health protection via the food we eat, is the newly inaugurated system of rating local restaurants on a sanitation, cleanliness basis. "A" rating for best, "B" for second class and "C" for those which must improve or lose license in 30 days.

Good. Long needed. Nobody, I'm sure, wants to eat in an unclean, "C" class joint. All the same, there is a shortage of places to eat, at midday anyway, already in Atlanta. What are we going to do if too high a proportion are closed?

Carry lunch home with me, I guess. However, under no circumstances make your sandwiches with black market meats. If you want to get the fever?

ALTAR STAIRS By John Marvin Rast

Of Galba, the Roman, it was written when he came forth to conduct a case. "He came out with flushed face and flashing eyes, like one you would think who had already conducted and not merely prepared his case." Whatever misgivings he had were subdued by the consciousness of thorough preparation. With us who proclaim the unsearchable riches of the gospel of our Lord there may be a similar confidence. We know how formidable are the forces arrayed against us, but we are upborne by the knowledge that the truth of God is an anvil which has worn out many hammers.

Our hope is in Thee, O God our Father. School us in the eternal verities. So transmit to us by the inspiration of Thy holy spirit sustenance of spirit that we shall worthily represent Thee to a needy world.

BILLY ROSE

I Was Just Thinking

I wish the maid wouldn't put the razor blades on the top shelf of the medicine chest. For a little gink like me they might as well be on the top of Mt. Everest. It's not much fun being five feet in a five-foot world. I'm going to bite the next girl who calls me Junior and kisses me on top of the head. A pox on the street corner comic who flips, "Hello, Sonny. Was your mother frightened by a cellar?" Wish my press agent would lay off these tired phrases—The Bantam Barnum, The Gremlin of Fifty-Fourth Street, the Shorty with the Fringe Top. I wish Eleanor wouldn't tell other people I wear a bow tie because I trip on the other kind.

BET THE REASON Joe Stalin is mad at us is because we keep sending six foot ambassadors. He can't fool another Tiny Tim about why he won't be photographed standing next to anybody. Bet Mickey Rooney would give up mugging if he could look Guy Cooper in the eye. Alexander the Great, Caesar, Napoleon—bet the real reason these pee-wees wanted to conquer the world was to make sure no one would stand in front of them when a parade went by.

Wish I were a few inches taller. When I go to the movies I wouldn't have to ask the lady in front of me to please remember her head.

HOW COME I never got into this baseball business? I hear tell six clubs have broken all time attendance records this season, and they're hiring octopuses to count the money. Well, I like a buck as well as the next fellow—who happens to be Old Scrooge.

The ball-and-bat game seems a soft touch compared to show business. You hire 30 spy young men, untie them, and let the script write itself. From there in, your only worries are dry cleaning the uniforms and peddling the hot dogs. If one of your buxoms belts it out of the park with the bases loaded in the first inning, Joe Customer is satisfied for the rest of the afternoon. If I were to pack all my punch lines into the first 10 minutes of a show, it would fold so fast the scenery would be out on the sidewalk before the critics.

COMPARED TO what we pay actors, ball players work for chewing tobacco. Jack Benny gets his sponsor more in a couple of months than the combined yearly salaries of all the players on a major league team. I've got a pair of comics you never heard of working in my cabaret—they get more than Ted Williams.

Oh well, I guess I'd better stick to the Great Indoors. If I owned a ball club I'd have to see an occasional game. First thing you know I'd be out in the sunshine, and long ago I decided the sun was only for apricots.

One of the crazy, wonderful things about people is that they make jokes about misfortune. There's the famous example of the fellow in San Francisco during the earthquake who cracked, "If I only had a cocktail shaker."

RIGHT NOW the air is full of meat shortage gags. A taxi-driver told me they're not showing Donald Duck cartoons any more.

The other day in a neighborhood movie a woman yanked a fork in the screen and yelled, "OPA or no OPA—my kids gotta eat."

The elevator man quipped that meat was so scarce Kate Smith had to hire two bodyguards. Another wheeze is that the butchers have talent scouts at the race tracks, and chophouse menus now read, "Lobsters from Maine, Hamburgers from Hialeah."

My doctor winked and told me the one about the bull in the Chicago stockyards who saw the empty pens, said "What's the use of living?" and committed suicide.

You Now Can Make Your Own Mistakes

The Pennsylvania Railroad has introduced a vending machine which sells tickets automatically.

Any day now, I expect to read of a bewildered stranger who tries for a piece of gum and ends up in Spangmoor, Mont.

One trusts they have figured out a way to make the gadget accept folding money. By the time a citizen deposited enough nickels and dimes for a round-trip ticket to San Francisco, he could have walked.

The inventor is probably already working on a de luxe model... one which, for an extra coin, lights up and gives out with "Chattanooga Choo-choo."

Railroads are becoming more and more mechanized. About the only thing still done by hand is relieving passengers of the tip.

This latest development should have quite an appeal to hygienic-minded travelers who want their tickets untouched by human hand. But it'll never fully replace the old-time ticket agent... not, that is, until it is able to inform the inquisitive as to whether the 3:15 is on time and point out the way to the ladies' room.

Wallace Friendship May Save Democrats

WASHINGTON—Former Secretary of Commerce Henry Wallace might easily be the deciding factor in the congressional elections now only a few weeks off.

As the recognized leader of liberal forces in the country, many labor and liberal elements will naturally turn to him for guidance. For this reason it must be admitted that Mr. Wallace has displayed a high degree of good sportsmanship in consenting to make a series of speeches in support of Democratic candidates during the remaining period of the campaign.

After being forced out of the Cabinet by President Truman, it would have been the natural thing for him to seek in his tent. Either that or wage an open attack on the President.

Not Alone Two of Mr. Wallace's former associates in the old Roosevelt Cabinet, who were let out under similar circumstances, are following this latter line. Former Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau and former Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes have been busy throwing bricks at the Administration.

Mr. Wallace, it would seem, has a greater grievance than either of these two for the reason that he was dismissed for the commission of an act which was approved by the President in advance.

Nevertheless, he shows a disposition to bury whatever bitterness he may hold and go along with the Democratic ticket in the current campaign.

In doing this the former Cabinet officer and Vice President shows not only a rare quality of party loyalty but good judgment as well.

Had he done otherwise he would have been open to the charge that he never was a Democrat in the first place. His critics would have pointed to his earlier Republican affiliation by way of saying that he merely was a political opportunist.

Moreover, if the Democrats should lose control of the Lower House in the coming elections a large share of the blame would have been laid at the feet of Mr. Wallace. Particularly would this be true if he should remain silent or conduct an open fight on the Administration's foreign policy.

Aggressive Because the effect of a defeatist attitude on the part of Mr. Wallace would be certain to keep a large block of Democratic voters away from the polls, his followers and sympathizers might be expected to remain away in sufficient numbers to influence the outcome.

By lending himself to the party effort to maintain control of Congress he avoids any criticism that could be made of him later if the Democrats do lose the House.

Thus Mr. Wallace puts himself in better position for the execution of whatever plans he may have in connection with the 1948 presidential campaign.

He may be looking to either one of two things—either the presidential nomination, in case Mr. Truman decides not to seek a second term, or to go on the ticket with Mr. Truman if the latter runs.

The circumstances of Mr. Wallace's behavior since his dismissal from the Cabinet have been so unorthodox that they suggest a definite plan of action for the 1948 campaign.

That is to say, it is not altogether natural for a man to be kicked out of the Cabinet unceremoniously, as he was, and then to continue to support the man who ousted him.

A further note of mystery is added to it all by the fact that Mr. Wallace, in his address to the nation on the night of his dismissal, had not an unkind word to say about Mr. Truman. He accepted the matter in good grace, whereas the more orthodox procedure would have been for him to fill the air with blue epithets.

Suspicion Grown of these rather strange circumstances has a suspicion—that perhaps some kind of a deal was struck between the President and Mr. Wallace at the time he was asked to resign. It could have to do with the 1948 presidential contest.

By agreeing to hold his peace it is possible that Mr. Wallace was offered a pledge by Mr. Truman to support him for second place on the ticket two years hence? Some people think so.

HAROLD MARTIN

The Bears Come Over the Mountain

PENSACOLA, N. C.—Once you have hunted and killed a bear, the folks in these parts say, you will know from then on out that all other forms of hunting are for women and children only.

One who holds to this theory strongly is Mr. Ewart Wilson, who lives at the head of the valley from which the hills slope up toward the towering crest of the Black Mountain range, where Mount Mitchell, the highest peak in the East, frowns down from its height of 6,684 feet. He is a third-generation bear hunter. His grandfather, old man Big Tom Wilson, lived here and hunted bear with such zeal that his name became famous throughout all North Carolina and they are now thinking of honoring the old man by naming for him one of the Black Brothers, two crowded peaks shouldering Mitchell. Big Tom Wilson killed 113 bears. Dolf Wilson, Ewart's father, killed 112 bears, quitting in his prime because he did not wish to break his father's record. And now Ewart, the third in line, is hunting bear without keeping count of them, because he does not wish to break the old record, now passing on the bear-hunting fever to his son, Ned, who killed his first bear last year at 17.

Limited Due to the game laws, of course, Mr. Wilson is only able to hunt bear from Oct. 15 to Jan. 1. The rest of the time he spends thinking about hunting bear and getting ready to hunt bear and talking about hunting bear. He loves to talk about hunting bear almost as well as he loves to hunt, and he can talk a man many strange things about the bear and his habits. You begin to understand something about the bear as he talks, and when he is discussing a bear hunt in great detail, you begin to think of the bear as a bearish almost human.

"It becomes natural to hear individual bears referred to by human names, or descriptive names, such as Honest John, the bear which would not kill more cattle than he could eat; or the Hurricane bear, so called because he would progress through the laurel slicks and the rhododendron hells with such rapidity his course looked like the path of a hurricane; and the Flyin' Kite, a bear so fleet of foot no dogs could stay on his trail long enough to bay him; and Old Kittlefoot, whose track was eight inches wide and 9½ inches long, the size of a medium-sized kettle.

Precaution The story of how Mr. Wilson says he killed Old Kittlefoot after Kittlefoot had gotten old and short of wind, and too fat to run from eating up nearly 200 head of Mr. Wilson's sheep, is a fine bear story, full of drama, but I am afraid to repeat it here, for another mighty bear hunter, Mr. Wiseman, claims that HE killed Kittlefoot, up on Grandfather Mountain, and I do not wish an angry bear hunter showing up at The Constitution office some morning with his bear dogs baying and blood in his eye, demanding that the record be put straight.

So I will stick to bears in general and their peculiarities. For instance, Mr. Wilson lives on the northern side of the Black Mountain range, where he owns 13,000 acres of land that is fine bear country in the years when the mast is good. And on the other side of the range, on the south side, is bear country equally as fine. And over there the bear can live as comfortably and as safely, on the Federal game refuge, as if he were in a cage at the zoo. And if he does not like the flavor of the acorns on the refuge, he can move over into the Asheville watershed, where hunting is not allowed, and be equally as safe.

But every year, between the Christmases, which means between Dec. 25 and Old Christmas on Jan. 5, the bears come over the mountains in droves to hibernate, and before they finally "go up," as the bear hunters say, Mr. Wilson and his friends have killed them by the dozens. Yet they keep on coming over the mountain to den up for their winter sleep.

Mystery Solved Knowing the intelligence of the bear, who knows just as well as a man does that he is safe on the refuge and the watershed, Mr. Wilson for many years was puzzled by what seemed to him this foolish daring on the part of the bear. Then he finally read something he thinks cleared it up. A bear, the writer said, knows by instinct that if he dens up where it is always cold and bleak, he will sleep the winter through without stirring and come out in the Spring fit and ready to handle any trouble that comes along. But if he finds his den where the sun can melt the snow and warm the earth, the warmth will rouse him and he will be up and about, hunting water, and grubbing around for food, and he will come to Spring thin and weak and nervous and needing a lot of tonics.

And on the north side of the mountain, where Mr. Wilson hunts, the snow lies on the ground from December to May and the cold winds blow and the sun never strikes into the caves and hollows and the rocky ledges where the bears love to den. While on the refuge side the snow falls and lies a day or so and melts and Winter comes and goes any time of the year, even in mid-Winter, to rouse a sleeping bear. So the bear ignores the danger and chooses the cold north side where the sleeping is best.

Bear Expert Mr. Wilson was very glad to get this point cleared which was not an open book to him. For he has studied the bear, and bear dogs, much as a great scientist might pore over the secrets of the atom. For example, after many years, he has found the perfect bear dog, he believes. To obtain this perfection, you take an ordinary hound, a Blue Tick or a Black and Tan, and breed her to a Norwegian, which is a dog that looks something like a shepherd, and then you cross the result with a Plott hound, a fabulous bear dog of North Carolina and Tennessee, and you have a dog which can't be beat. The hound blood gives them a nose for the trail, and the Norwegian and Plott blood give them stamina and grit, he says.

In fact, Mr. Wilson claims that it is solely his devotion to his dogs which has caused him, on numerous occasions, to trail a bear all day and all that night and all the next day, without a mouthful to eat, traveling through the roughest country man can imagine, just to be there to kill the bear when the dogs finally bay him.

"You put a dog on the trail of the bear, and he keeps on and on and on until he bays him," he says, "and he is expecting you to come and kill the bear. He is looking to you for that, for he knows he can't hold him. He can't kill him. And somehow I just can't stand to disappoint my dogs."

No Politics In Court!

NEW YORK—When the three "learned" Federal judges sitting en banque (or should it be in bunk?) bewailed the fact that they were helpless to do anything about the abridgment of the right of citizens of Georgia to vote as the result of the thimble-rigging county unit law in that State, they proved, if nothing else, that Georgia can be made famous for something else than its peaches.

The Court would have been much smarter than it was if, in upholding the right of Talmadge, the Negro-baiter, to be nominated by a minority vote, it had relied upon the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Colegrove, et al., v. Green, et al., decided on June 19 last. This decision also strangled at a gnat and swallowed a camel, although with better grace and more persuasively than did the three judges who decided in favor of Talmadge and his political larceny.

THIS CASE WILL come before the Supreme Court in the next few weeks. I am glad because I would like that Court to have a chance to reverse its outrageous decision in the Colegrove v. Green case. Perhaps with the full Court sitting the country will at last be treated to a decision representing the views of the majority of the Justices. Of course by that time Talmadge will undoubtedly have been re-elected on the basis of his sleight-of-hand nomination, but this issue ought to come up over and over again until the Court decides that the political rights of a citizen may not be either denied or abridged.

In the Colegrove case, there was involved the question whether a voter in the Fifth Congressional District of the State of Illinois, with a population of 112,116, was to have approximately nine times the voting power of a citizen in the Seventh District containing 914,053 citizens. Mr. Justice Frankfurter, speaking for a minority of four, found that the question involved was a "political" one, to step over which the sacred Supreme Court would have to raise delicately, and perhaps indecorously, the hem of its judicial robe.

THERE IS SUPPOSED to be a remedy for every wrong. This is another of those legal fictions that 99.4 percent pure judges are able to sterilize. For a remedy in this outrageous case, the learned Justice lefty passed the buck to the Legislature of Illinois or to the Congress. He did not care which of the two relieved him of this hot potato. However, the State Legislature will not act because it, too, is built upon a rotten borough system. It is true that the House of Representatives might do something to right the wrong, but there are too many rotten-borough Representatives in that body, not only from Illinois, but from other States. These include all of those where political slavery still exists as the result of the poll tax that still mocks our alleged democracy. It is not to be hoped that the House of Representatives will ever do anything about the unjust fractional voting in Illinois.

"IT IS HOSTILE to a democratic system to involve the judiciary in the politics of the people," declares Mr. Justice Frankfurter, as he draws his robe more protectively about him. Tut! Tut! Mr. Justice, how would you ever have come to occupy the high seat from which you can presume to speak with such authority if it had not been for the "politics of the people?"

Grand Coulee, Giant Of a New Northwest

SPOKANE, Wash.—To put it plainly, this traveler is a sucker for dams. We all are, no doubt. It's our admiration for the builder. No tour of our country is complete without a pilgrimage to our grandest monument in concrete, Grand Coulee Dam, which throws itself athwart the Columbia River about 100 miles from here.

Nearly a decade ago this traveler had one of his greatest thrills when he first looked upon it. Then it was only partly complete, but the vision was all there, like the rough sketch in charcoal, one of the noblest conceptions of a nation of builders. It was not the first, of course. TVA in Tennessee, and Boulder in Colorado, and Bonneville in Oregon came before it. It will not be the last.

ON THE FIRST VISIT we came up the old gorge of the Columbia, riding in a procession behind Franklin D. Roosevelt, perhaps foremost among our builder Presidents. There from below, the great wall of concrete burst upon the sight. It was beginning to rise against the mighty river. This time it burst upon sight from the other direction, as the car came around the last hill. There below was the valley of the future, the valley of hope, the great waters of the Columbia, shining under the sun, lying calm against that great wall of concrete, a giant cup formed by the hills which rise on every side.

It is an inspiring sight from the top of the dam—which is three-quarters of a mile across and 500 feet high, as tall as the Washington Monument in the National Capital. On one side, to the North, you look upon the lake—Roosevelt Lake—which disappears around a bend but extends 151 miles to the Canadian border.

THE DAM CREATED that lake. On this same side toward the eastern end of the bridge, you can see, far below, the tunnels carved under the rock wall through which the waters of the river will be pumped up, under the hills and over to form a new lake 26 miles long. Through a system of canals and irrigation ditches it will be spread over a million acres of now barren and unproductive land to the East.

And, over the other side of the dam, you look down upon the waters as they fall, like a hurtling snowdrift, into the gorge below, a man-made sheen of beauty.

The heart of the great monster is underneath the dam. There the great turbines turned by the river create the electrical energy to turn wheels of old and new industries hundreds of miles away, and to pump water into the new lake for irrigating farms of the future.

UNDERNEATH THE DAM is a great building as spacious as many of our big office buildings—miles and miles of tunnels on numerous floors leading in and out to a series of shiny, clean control rooms. GALLUP POLL

Public Tires Of OPA

PRINCETON, N. J.—The public's faith in price control has declined sharply in the past five months.

The majority of voters last May wanted OPA price ceilings kept on food, clothing and manufactured products. Today these controls are far less popular. Meat, especially, is an item which voters from coast to coast think should be decontrolled.

The one ceiling which continues overwhelmingly popular is rent control.

The changing attitude of the public toward OPA can be seen by comparing the results of two Institute surveys, one reported in late May and the other just completed.

The vote in the most recent poll is given first.

"Do you think the present price ceilings should be kept on or taken off the following items?"

	Kept	Taken	No
	on	off	opin.
Meats	42%	53%	5%
Other Foods	42	51	7
Clothing	49	44	7
Autos, radios and other mfg. goods	45	46	9
Rents	67	27	6

The poll last May dealt with the same items, except for meat.

MAY, 1946

"For the next year would you like to have OPA price ceilings kept on or taken off the following items?"

	Kept	Taken	No
	on	off	opin.
Food	75%	21%	4%
Rent	78	17	4
Clothing	70	26	4
Autos, radios and other mfg. goods	66	27	7

It will be noted that whereas in May anywhere from two-thirds to four-fifths of the voters wanted controls kept on the various items, today less than half believe controls should remain on anything except rents.

Political leaders in both parties have indicated that meat, or the lack of it, may play an important part in this year's Congressional election.

Today's poll does find some difference of opinion among Republican and Democratic voters as to whether present meat price ceilings should be kept on or taken off. In general Democratic voters favor keeping them on, while Republicans are opposed.

The vote by political parties and by major occupation groups follows:

	Kept	Taken	No
	on	off	opin.
Republicans	29%	67%	4%
Democrats	52	42	6
Prof. and Bus.	37	59	4
Farmer	34	60	6
White Collar	41	54	5
Manual Workers	47	47	6

NEW YORK: "Meat dealers ask OPA to take over and operate the meat business."—News item.

Most of us are somewhat hazy as we read the daily news.

There are things to drive us crazy, to perplex us and confuse; Whether Russia should be petted or ignored, we do not know, Or if we should all get fretted and not speak to Cousin Joe.

Alien matters claim attention, we must plan to handle those Which disturb us, not to mention what is just below the nose; Individuals and nations try to tap our country's tills And their highest aspirations are for us to foot the bills.

If you work they think it's fitting, part of every dollar made Must support some loafer sitting on his well-worn shoulder blade— Taxes higher than a steeple keep the worker stripped and flat, And a hundred thousand people are employed collecting that.

When they framed the Constitution, it was never their intent This should be an institution to support the indigent— It was thought the mind and muscle of a strong and sturdy race Would provide the pep and hustle that would set a steady pace.

Maybe we are in the clover . . . maybe all is nice and sweet, While you mull the matter over, we'll go out and look for meat.

Hollywood Is Wild, Out of This World

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—To begin with, we spent the week's grocery money and such self-confidence as we could muster with no friend to guide us on the most devilishly daring hat we ever saw—only to find when we reached the airport that our competitor and companion on the 3,000-mile, week-long junket was wearing one just like it.

Then we arrived in the film capital, managed to take the essence of RKO-provided limousines and hotel rooms in stride, sneaked up the bathroom window the better to view Grauman's Chinese theater across the street and sent our tired old toothbrush and our roommate's shiny new one hurtling down on Hollywood Boulevard!

WITH A START like that our equilibrium has been badly shaken and Hollywood is doing nothing to help us regain it. The darndest things go on in this town. Dogs wear rain coats when there's a shower. One of the female strikers who is picketing Warner Brothers studio paces back and forth in front of the gate knitting as she walks, Madame LeFarge fashion. Ken Murray flicks cigar ashes on the audience at his "Blackouts" variety show and then tells them, "it's your own fault—you oughta bought a box seat."

But at the Walt Disney studio where we have spent the last two days seeing "Song of the South" and talking Uncle Remus and "Is this Georgia or is it ain't?" stuff to artists and actors, everything is even more remote to the solid earth we live on back home. Everybody on the 59-acre lot, including the chief himself, is known by his first name with the exception of the paymaster. They call him, "Mister Quina." And Georgia history, manners, customs and countryside was required reading for all the makers of "Song of the South." Disney, "de pippin on Pichtrey," must be pleeze.

HOLLYWOOD is funny and beautiful and enormously interesting to us but at this moment the center of the universe, as far as the Hollywoodians were met are concerned, seems to be Georgia.

"De pippin on Pichtrey," ventures handsome Gil Souto, the Brazilian-born international publicity man for Disney, "de pippin on Pichtrey, must be pleeze."

Bonnet bashers BEWARE!

You can't murder this hat!

Makes you sore, doesn't it? There you are with a neatly shaped hat—and wham! Along comes a high wind, crowded check room, rush-hour melee—and you've a busted bonnet that looks like a lopsided pot. But not this hat, mister—not this one! Let 'em treat it rough. Those jaunty, crisp lines are there to stay. It's Bond's Perma-Blocked hat—a mellow, fur-felt beauty that always looks its band-box best. You can have it in three styles, two brim widths, all colors. And you pay no premium for its extra quality. Your size is on deck right now—come and get it!

Famous Koolvent Lifetime Metal Awnings Bring Rain-proof Ventilation

FOR RESIDENTIAL, commercial or industrial use, only Koolvent meets all awning requirements. Rain-proof ventilation, distinctive charm, permanence and economy are offered Georgians in these lifetime metal awnings. Above are shown a few recent installations.

Fill Many Needs For Homes, Stores And Industries

Seeking the greatest protection against winter's rain and storm damage to doors and woodwork, hundreds of Georgians this fall are installing Koolvent Lifetime Metal Awnings. Not only do Koolvents give rain-proof ventilation, but bring permanence and beauty at surprisingly low cost.

Because Koolvent's outstanding features are fully protected by patents, they are found in no other awnings. Koolvent Awnings are made of rust-resisting metal strips with right-angle flanges overlapping to prevent rain from coming through. However, a forced circulation between the strips pulls hot summer air out through the top and ends to earn for Koolvent's reputation as the coolest awnings ever made.

Users find these six major advantages in Koolvent Awnings: RAIN-PROOF because no water can get through the top and because both ends are protected fully by patented louvers, eliminating damage and expensive repairs to doors, sills and floor.

VENTILATED to bring summer temperatures as much as 20 percent lower. Ventilated metal long has been recognized as the finest insulation.

BEAUTIFUL, as they may be obtained in a wide choice of solid or alternating colors or in natural-finish aluminum. Koolvent Awnings are endorsed by leading architects and home builders because they harmonize so perfectly with lines and colors of any home.

CUSTOM-BUILT, right here in Atlanta, for each individual installation. Koolvents are guaranteed unconditionally as to workmanship and materials.

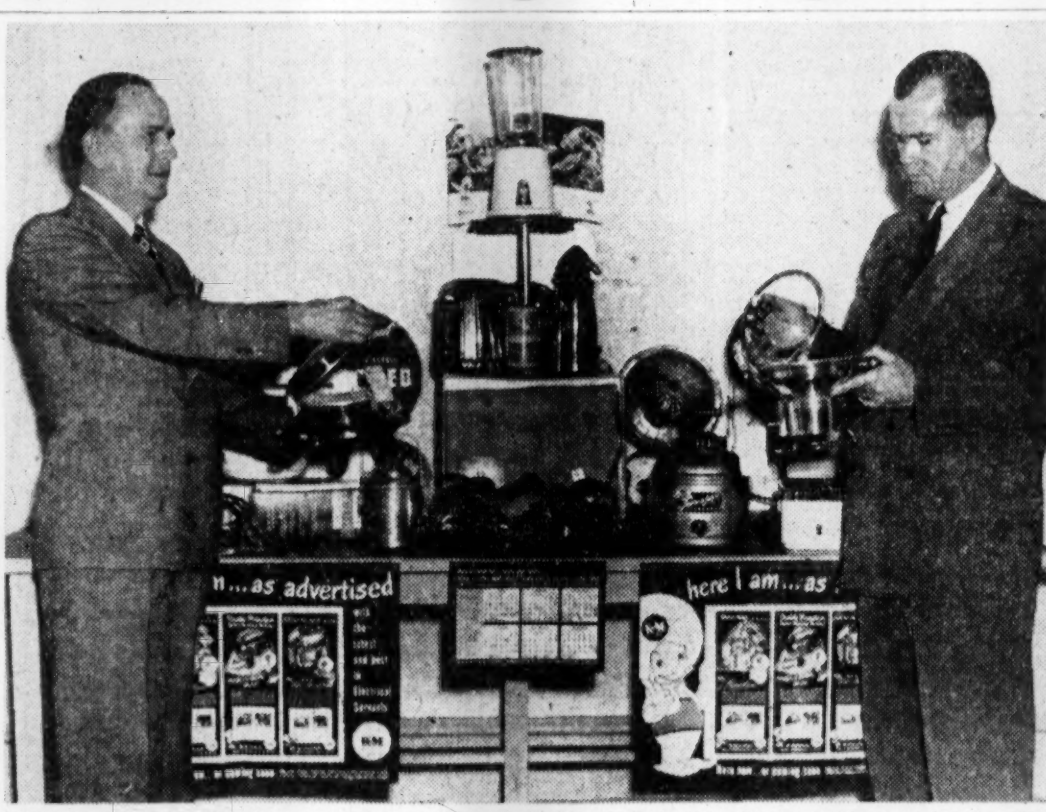

PERMANENT because nothing about them can rot, warp, split, shrink or wear out. No moving parts to stick and get out of order. Koolvents are what their name implies—lifetime. They're fireproof, too, of course.

ECONOMICAL not only because of the savings from damage to buildings and furnishings, but because considered over even a short period, their actual price is below that of old-fashioned types.

SMART Koolvents are equally suitable for home, office, store, industrial plant, public building or apartment house. Their widest use in homes is for windows, porches, doorways and terraces. Commercial and industrial uses include office and shop windows, doors, store fronts, loading platforms, canopies, outdoor displays.

While Koolvent Awnings are finished in especially developed long-lasting enamel colors, there is an increasing demand for natural finish aluminum Koolvents, especially for stores and industries. Not only does aluminum's attractive appearance have wide appeal, but natural finish aluminum banishes forever any problems of costs of maintenance.

ENJOYED OVER STATE. While Koolvent leadership has been long established in Atlanta, their many advantages now are enjoyed throughout Georgia. Koolvent Awnings recently have been installed in these progressive Georgia cities: Albany, Alma,

The K-M "Genie," shown on placard, is a world-known symbol of household "magic."

Martin Invites Dealers To Inspect Knapp-Monarch Electrical Appliances

The Charles S. Martin Distributing Company, Inc., 234 Peachtree St., N. E., invites inspection of the Knapp-Monarch line of electrical appliances. They are products of quality, dependability and value, upon which a dealer can build a permanent, lasting business, he states.

Charles S. Martin, President of the firm, says: "In K-M, we have a line of electrical appliances with exclusive popular features which our customers want — features that attract buyers and enable you to outsell competition."

J. W. Michael, manager of the small appliance division, says, "Knapp-Monarch advertising with its broad national coverage, is working for the dealers day in and day out, creating a backlog of business for him to cash in on."

when the present "sales honeymoon" is over. K-M merchandising packaging, feature tags and instruction booklets all are designed to make your sales job easier.

Knapp-Monarch electrical appliances, fans and Therm-A-Jugs are of durable construction, and outstanding in appearance. Throughout the world they are known for quality. The Tel-A-Matic Toast Maker automatically discharges toast when done, automatically shuts itself off. The Tel-A-Matic Iron, with a Fabric Dial Heat Control, allows the user to work with a flick of a switch. The Tel-A-Matic Corn Popper, Waffle Baker and Sandwich Toaster combination, twin waffle baker; the Knapp-Monarch liquidizer, which at a flick of a switch, turns vitamin-rich fresh fruits and vegetables into delicious nourishing drinks. The Knapp-Monarch Speed Mix performs dozens of tedious kitchen chores quickly and easily, as it mixes, whips, stirs, and beats or extracts fruit juices.

The K-M heating pad with the multi-heat control switch glows in the dark, has a removable zipper cover which is moisture repellent and washable. The element is encased in a fireproof asbestos envelope. K-M room heaters are ideal for any place where extra heat is needed. Knapp-Monarch hair dryers, curling irons, vaporizers, infra-red ray lamps, Magik Mist Aerosol Dispensers, Jack Frost fans and Therm-A-Jugs all embody the fine features of K-M manufacture.

All K-M appliances are laboratory-tested to insure mechanical perfection, then kitchen-tested under actual operating conditions. Kitchen testing enables K-M not only to check the performance of all appliances, but to develop new and exclusive features that have maximum appeal to the user.

Refrigeration Exchange, Inc., Completely Equips Another Restaurant

RESTAURANT EQUIPMENT—Above shows some of the equipment furnished by Refrigeration Exchange, 237 S. Pryor Street, to Spinks Brothers, who have opened a modern restaurant on the four-lane highway, three miles south of Marietta. Refrigeration Exchange completely equipped the modern "drive-in" and restaurant.

Spinks Brothers Open on New Marietta Road

On the four-lane highway three miles south of Marietta the Spinks brothers have opened their new, modern Triple H Inn.

When the Spinks brothers decided to open a "drive-in" and restaurant early this year, they found that construction laborers were almost non-existent. As each of the brothers, Halton, Hugh and Herschel, had previous experience in construction, they decided to do the work themselves. From the ground to the rooftop, all the work represents the handicraft of the three owners.

The dining room and kitchen, among the most modern and efficient in the Atlanta area, were completely designed and installed by the Refrigeration Exchange of Atlanta.

The Refrigeration Exchange designed the kitchen with an eye to saving footstep and making a speedier operation for their kitchen. Their cheerful, airy dining room was planned to get the maximum seating capacity and still not be crowded.

The Spinks brothers invite you out to see their new restaurant and enjoy chicken and steaks and complete dinners superbly cooked by their expert chef.

The Refrigeration Exchange, Inc., located at 237 S. Pryor St., will be glad to help you remodel your present restaurant or design and plan your new place. They have a complete stock of restaurant and refrigeration equipment. Phone WA. 0296.

IRON PURIFIER—Recently installed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Olton, at 3274 North Druid Hills Road, to remove iron contamination and clarify all the water used in the home. It was installed by the Mechanical Engineering and Supply Company, 137 Luckie St., specialist in water treatment. Phone MA. 4231.

Rural Water Supplies Need Good Treatment

Mechanical Engineering and Supply Company has analyzed over a thousand private water supplies in this general area and have found that about 90 percent need one or several forms of corrective treatment to make them suitable for household use.

Lewis V. Emery, owner of the Company, states that by far the majority of such individual water systems contain soluble organic iron, which discolors the water, stains bath fixtures and ruins laundered goods. This is a form of plant life, and accumulates in the pipes and gradually reduces their capacity, finally clogging pipe systems entirely.

Some such waters appear perfectly clear when first drawn, but on standing, or used in cooking or laundry work, the iron comes out of solution. That is why tea turns black when poured over ice to make iced tea. That is why your bath tub and other fixtures have reddish-brown stains.

An easy test is to look into the toilet flush tank. Is it badly stained? Or drain off the bottom of your hot water tank—this should be done once a month even when city water is used. You will probably find plenty of evidence of iron contamination.

These conditions are easily remedied, and Mechanical Engineering and Supply Company will gladly assist you. The first step is a laboratory analysis of the water to determine the total iron content, the hardness, the pH, the total alkalinity and carbon dioxide content. From this examination the Company can prescribe the proper method of treatment. They make no charge for this service, nor is there any obligation to buy equipment. A service engineer will collect the sample, the laboratory will analyze it, and you will get the Company's recommendations.

Sales and installations may be concluded on a cash or time payment plan to suit your needs, but you do get a positive guarantee on this equipment and the results.

Good water is priceless. It is cheap only when perfect. It must be crystal clear, not too hard, alkaline, nor acid. It must be absolutely free from unpleasant color, taste and odor. It must not ruin fine silks, linens and cotton goods.

Mr. Emery recited a recent case from a hard water section, where a man had been habitually troubled with kidney stones and gall stones. His doctor insisted he buy a water softener and drink only softened water. The man bought one from Mechanical Engineering and Supply Company, his doctor bought one, and at the same time his neighbor bought one. Mr. Emery went on to say that while they have always advocated water softeners in hard water sections, this is the first time a customer has come to him with a doctor's prescription calling for softened water.

Spitalny Orchestra Opens Popular Concert Series

By MARGUERITE BARTHOLOMEW

The new Sunday afternoon "Pop" Concert series, inaugurated by the Atlanta Music Club and Impresario Marvin McDonald, opened brilliantly yesterday with a double feature program that presented Phil Spitalny and his All-Girl Orchestra in a full length concert followed by the orchestra's weekly "Hour of Charm" broadcast over Columbia Broadcasting System.

A truly spectacular audience of 6,000 crowded the auditorium to its utmost capacity to greet the dynamic Russian maestro and his band of beautiful and accomplished musicians.

Gowned uniformly in creations of filmy, billowing white, relieved by applied flower clusters of pink and lavender glittering with sequins, the orchestra presented a charming picture on the tiered platform.

Competition Stiff in Race For Coroner

With entries closing at noon, Oct. 12, for the Nov. 5 election, 18 candidates have so far qualified for the office of Coroner of Fulton County. Forty-eight candidates entered the lists for Coroner several years ago, and it is expected other candidates will enter before the closing date.

Among the candidates are Ed L. Almond, who resigned from the Fulton County Commission Tuesday; Deputy Coroner George Milton Kirkland, and Night Police Chief A. J. Holcombe, of the Atlanta force.

Others are Joe W. White, former FBI agent and State Patrol Commander; Rufus Daniel, Atlanta newspaperman; Dr. Robert K. Glass, Harry Lefkoff, Pat W. Colston, Frank S. Evans, L. W. (Plugg) Flowers, Herman C. McCall, Mack Upshaw, Tom C. Morris, Clarence J. Thompson, Joe Hill Smith, E. D. Jackson, George B. Rakestraw, and Joseph W. Van Hich.

Since the resignation of Mrs. Paul Donehoo Martin, the position of Coroner has been filled by Civil Court Judge Wilson Parker. The office pays up to $5,000 per year in fees and whoever wins the election will serve until Dec. 31, 1949.

Stating that the office is outmoded, the League of Women Voters sought to have it abolished and replaced by that of an appointed medical examiner. However, when informed that it would take a constitutional amendment to make the change, the County Commission decided to hold the Coroner's election on the same date as the general election, especially since Judge Parker was anxious to be relieved of his extra duties.

British Plane Permitted To Resume Its Flight

LONDON, Oct. 6. — (UP) — A Foreign Office spokesman said Sunday night that the British courier plane forced down in Yugoslavia Saturday had received permission from Yugoslav authorities to continue its flight to Bari, Italy.

He announced that the Yugoslav Government acted after Charles Peake, British Ambassador to Belgrade, had protested to the Yugoslav Foreign Office against the reported action of a Yugoslav fighter plane which ordered the British craft to land at Nish, Yugoslavia, near the Greek border.

Yugoslav authorities agreed to permit the courier plane to leave immediately or as soon as weather permits, the spokesman added.

The plane was flying from Bucharest to Bari when it was grounded. All Royal Air Force flights over Yugoslavia were cancelled because of the incident.

AHOY, ADMIRAL

Naval Hero Crams Math Into Frosh

By DORIS LOCKERMAN

The boys in freshman algebra class out at Georgia Tech have a rear admiral to work their examples for them on the blackboard.

Francis McKee Adams, former captain of the assault transport USS Pierce would not have them know it, but he is trying to keep two jumps ahead of his class by hurried homework on a subject grown rusty during six assaults in the Pacific and an initial landing at Salerno.

Adams holds the Legion of Merit award and the Bronze Star for piloting his assault transport throughout the entire war without serious mishap. He was elevated to the rank of rear admiral upon his retirement Aug. 1.

The admiral taught mathematics at Annapolis in 1922 and had a second academic brush with the subject at Georgia Tech in 1940 when he was executive officer of the Naval ROTC Unit there.

He says he believes today's students, especially veterans, have to work harder at the mathematical exactitudes than they did before the war, but that they are more determined pupils.

"They got out of practice thinking along mathematical lines," he said, and added humorously, "and nobody understands that better than I do."

Admiral Adams lives with his wife at 367 North Garden Lane, N. E. Their son, Francis McKee, Jr., is a midshipman at Annapolis.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh
Want a Vacation from Marriage?

Alvin Blake went south on his vacation, for some fishing, and left his Missus to enjoy a vacation from the corn-cob pipe, clothes in a heap, and solos on the harmonica.

First few days, Martha enjoyed it—house neat and quiet, top back on the toothpaste, no morning mess from Alvin's midnight snacks (Al's partial to a bit of cheese and beer at bedtime).

Come the end of the week, she began to fidget; couldn't even read the Clarion, it looked so unmissed; didn't have any appetite for solo body to cook for. She was about to wire Al, when he barges home a week ahead of time, and she almost cries for gratitude. ("Felt the same way myself," says Al.)

From where I sit, those differences of habit and opinion—whether they have to do with corn-cob pipes, a glass of beer, or playing the harmonica, seem mighty trivial when you're separated. And they are, too!

Advertising Head Addresses Commerce Frats

In advertising, it's "which shall I buy, and not shall I buy," according to George E. Wilkinson, Eastern Manager of the Trade Extension Division of The American Weekly, who addressed the Atlanta Chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi, a Georgia Evening College professional fraternity.

Wilkinson gave the students an example of the value of the "dual display" at a meeting last night at the Biltmore Hotel. In a survey conducted recently by The American Weekly, a nationally advertised brand of salad dressing was displayed in a store for a week, side by side with a non-advertised brand. More than twice as much salad dressing was sold when the "dual display" was used than when either brand was displayed alone.

Wilkinson, in response to questions from the audience, attributed the enormous circulation of the Weekly to the policy of Morrill, Georgia, for 45 years its editor. This policy, Wilkinson explained, is based on the "16 elements of human interest" which include "love, hate, fear, curiosity, etc."

A buffet supper was served after Wilkinson's talk, and at the conclusion of the meeting, the Chapter was presented with a plaque for having won an efficiency contest in competition with more than 60 other chapters throughout the nation.

Lee was a native of Georgia who came to Florida during the boom of the mid-twenties and received State-wide notice when as Highlands County Attorney, at Avon Park, he barricaded a railroad track and served a process in a railroad tax collection suit against the engineer. He later represented Highlands County in the 1931 State House of Representatives and was elected State Comptroller in 1932.

As the State official in charge of withdrawal of funds from the Treasury by all Departments, Lee was one of the State's most powerful figures. In the last two years, he frequently disagreed with Governor Millard Caldwell and other Cabinet officials on postwar spending policies.

Tattnall Inmate Questions Right To Bunch Terms

A Tattnall prisoner has challenged in the Georgia Supreme Court the practice of judges giving "indeterminate sentences" to be served consecutively.

Nacomas Morris contends that it is illogical and illegal to expect him to serve three sentences, one right after the other, with each of these sentences being for a minimum of three years and a maximum of four years. Morris has served four years for forgery in Crisp County and he wants out. It is the practice of the Department of Corrections in the case of consecutive indeterminate sentences such as this to add all the minimum sentences and all the maximum sentences. This would have Morris serve a total minimum term of nine years and a total maximum term of 12 years.

But Morris says there is no basis for the Department to add these sentences.

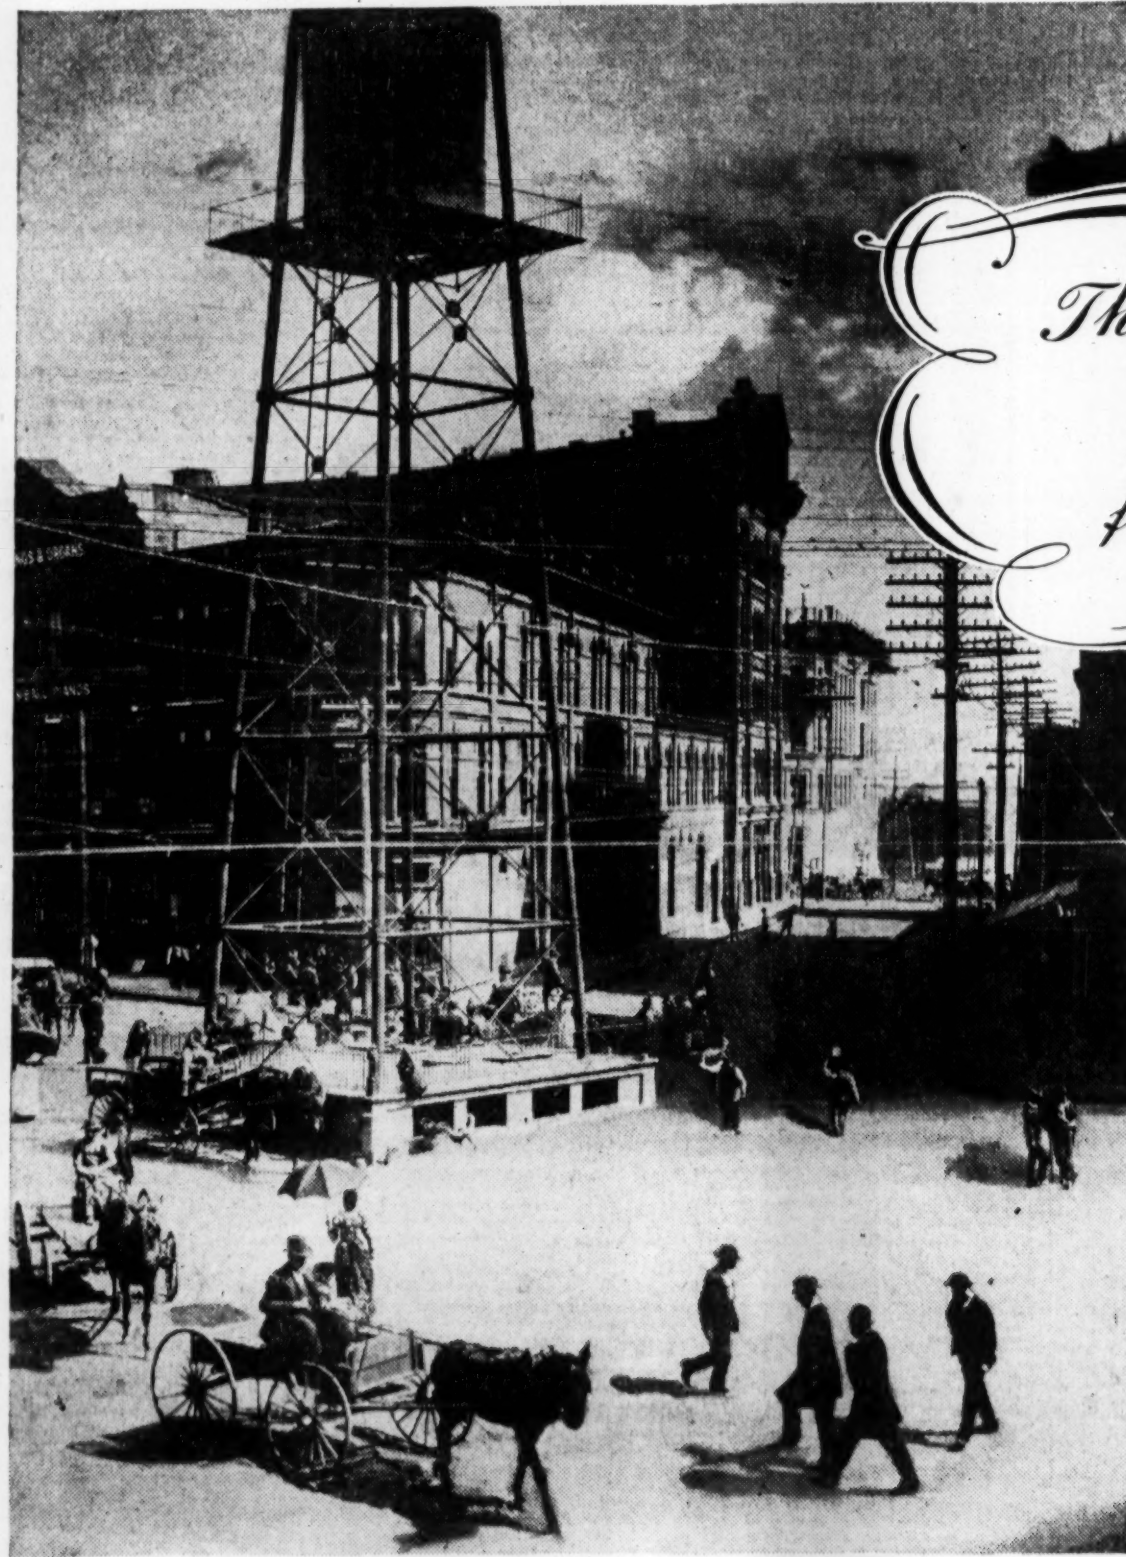

Morris originally filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the Reidsville City Court. This was overruled, and he appealed to the Supreme Court. Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook plans to fight the move in the high court.

THE ARTESIAN WELL AT FIVE POINTS

So solid is the granite foundation on which Atlanta is built, that it is said the "thump, thump, thump" of drilling operations could be heard and felt on Stone Mountain when the artesian well was being bored at Five Points.

Thirsty passers-by stopped at
for a cool drink of water

Public drinking cup and horse trough typical of those placed 'round about in Atlanta's business district in the 80s. Cup used for sketch belongs to collection of historical relics on display at the "Fair of 1850" at Jonesboro. Photograph for horse trough was made available through courtesy of Atlanta Historical Society.

It is difficult to imagine that the bustling hub that is Five Points today was once a leisurely spot where passersby stopped to quench their thirst from drinking cups fastened to public hydrants—and to water their horses and mules' at nearby troughs. But that was true in 1886 when Atlanta, in order to supplement the limited supply of water afforded by the old reservoir, bored an artesian well at Five Points to supply water for downtown establishments. The water, pumped by steampower, flowed at the rate of 225,000 gallons a day.

The City Health Department later found the water of this well of doubtful purity and its use was abandoned in 1893.

But the needs of the city continued to grow. And Atlanta, looking to the future, started a plant more than fifty years ago to utilize the water of the Chattahoochee. From this early beginning, Atlanta's water system has grown to be one of the best in the nation. Zealously guarded, it provides Atlanta's citizens and industries with 52,400,000 gallons of filtered, chlorinated water daily—and is one of the city's greatest assets.

THE CHARM OF MAPLE—This combination sitting room-dining room done in maple is proof that this light-colored, satin-smooth hardwood, beloved by Americans from earliest days, is highly adaptable and suitable for both town and country houses. James Edwards, decorator, who designed the room pictured for the Fall opening of Davison's "Charm Home," uses effectively the softening effects of upholstered pieces with maple. Two shades of green and soft pinks are used for covering the sofa and chairs. Two walls of this large room are lined with shelves holding heirloom pieces of glass and china. Low sectional bookcases provide the only division between sitting and dining room portions. Many books with their colorful bindings, and small growing plants on the shelves give much warmth and livability to this room, which is charming without being quaint. Davison's redecorated "Charm Home" which for Fall is an "all-maple house," will open to the public Monday.

ELIZABETH WOODWARD SAYS

Why Waste Time Feuding When You Can Be Friends?

All last winter you and five other girls made a crowd. You ganged up to go everywhere together. Seldom were you seen separately. It was always the six of you. And things went merrily until you fell out. The gang split asunder with a loud crash. Never mind what you fought over... your mob fun was over. Four of them stuck together... and you and Edna paired off alone.

From being the closest of friends... you turned over night into the bitterest of enemies. Not a good word did you have for those four other girls. You wouldn't even speak to them when you collided on the street. And they were equally sweet to you.

The rest of the mob looked on your fracas and shook their heads. These things do happen and they're too bad. But it looked to everybody as though you and Edna were the cause of it all. You were outnumbered. You two against the four others. Even your boy friends took sides. And the side they took wasn't yours!

A SIGN OF TRUCE

So you and Edna made the best of it. You tried to find your fun together. You saw each other constantly... to fill up the hole left by your four other cronies. And you spent your time panning your dear departed friends. You thrived on spite and wounded pride. You never did a thing to cause the breach... not you two. It was all the fault of the other four... every bit of it. And you and Edna would never forgive them for it!

Then came the summer... and Edna went away to camp, leaving you high and dry. You puttered around by yourself until she came home. And she came over at once to see you... dragging in her wake her closest camp friend, none other than the leader of that FOURSOME! You could hardly believe your eyes! Edna... your closest and dearest friend... had broken your solemn pact. She'd forgiven those girls... at least she'd forgiven one of them! And now what are you supposed to do? You feel bereft, deserted, betrayed. Edna had sworn on a stack of history books she'd never speak to those females again. And here she is right back in their midst. It's enough to curdle your friendship with Edna. Why you can't even talk frankly anymore. Every single thing you say about these four girls will get right straight back to them.

SMOKE A PEACE PIPE

Well, something happened to change Edna's mind. Perhaps when she got to camp, strange faces, she was glad enough to grab the hand of an old friend. So they buried the hatchet in the middle of the lake.

And it would be a good idea for you to do the same... even if you can't find a lake. Life's too short to go around cluttered up with bitter enemies. It's too short to cloud your mind with grim and gruesome thoughts. It's too short to hate anybody. When it takes such a short time to forgive and forget...

Your silly squabble and your enormous pride are the biggest things in your life at the moment. It would admit that you have been silly... and are sorry... the other girl would undoubtedly do the same. Edna has made the opening wedge... now you plow on in behind her!

FLESH AND FANTASY

All Glitter Not Gam, Says Glamor Molder

By VIRGINIA MACPHERSON

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 6—(UP)—

Willis, of Hollywood, a young man who made headlines two years ago when he told the world he manufactured padded stockings for Greer Garson, went even further out on the limb and named a lot of other movie queens who flock to him for leg camouflage.

Willis is the lad who keeps the actresses supplied with nylons. In many cases he also supplies ready-made shapely gams in the same box.

And he's willing to talk about his art. Which makes him our candidate for the bravest man of the year. We kept our own legs tucked w-a-a-y under the table and told him to fire away.

"My job," says Willis, "is to make stockings that will flatter the stars. In the case of the ones with really beautiful legs, it is a pleasure. In the case of the others, it is hard work."

Can The SOAP SHORTAGE Get WORSE?

IT'S REALLY SERIOUS! The worldwide shortage of fats and oils to make soaps is desperate. We've got to depend on used fats from your kitchen, Mrs. Housewife! It's the only extra source we have.

Yes, it can—unless EVERY housewife gets back to saving Used Fats!

MORE USED FATS are needed! So get back in the habit of scraping and skimming. Tell your neighbor to do the same. Every drop is needed for soap and other peacetime goods.

ARE YOU JUST A PLAYTHING OF NATURE?

Nature may endow you with breathtaking beauty, a lovely curvaceous figure. She may bestow gifts on you that make you a brilliant actress, a leader in your class at college, sought after at dances, or a charming wife and mother.

Yes, Nature may do all this. And yet you may find your face mockingly slapped if you suffer these distressing symptoms, which so many unfortunate girls and women do.

Something You Should Not Joke About!

So if female functional monthly disturbances are causing you to suffer from pain, nervous distress and feel weak, restless, so cranky and irritable that you almost turn into a "she-devil" on such days—THIS IS SOMETHING YOU SHOULDN'T JOKE ABOUT. Start right away—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve such symptoms. It's famous for this purpose. And don't forget—Pinkham's Compound does more than relieve such monthly pain. This great medicine also relieves accompanying nervous tension, irritability, those tired-out, mean "pick-on-everyone" feelings—when due to this cause. Taken regularly throughout the month—Pinkham's Compound helps build up resistance against such distress—a very sensible thing to do. Just see if you, too, don't remarkably benefit! All druggists.

York's 10th-Inning Homer Wins Opener for Sox, 3-2

By GAYLE TALBOT

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—(AP)—The last time the white ball could be seen from the stands it was glistering in the sun and arching down into the crowd deep in the left field bleachers, about 375 feet from home plate.

The ball had been struck with shattering force by Rudy York, big part-Indian from Georgia, first baseman of the Boston Red Sox, and on its soaring flight the American League champions rode to a dramatic 3-to-2, 10-inning triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals in Sunday's World Series opener.

JOHNNY BRADBERRY

Bradberry and Butts Get Notes on Navy

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—We went out to Baker Field Saturday and watched the Columbia-Navy football game. Therefore, this piece for the paper may be taken as an unofficial scout report on the Middles for Bobby Dodd, whose Georgia Tech team plays them later in the season.

However, it may be advisable for Dodd to supplement it with a report by one of his assistant coaches, as it's hard enough for us to keep up with a game from the press box, much less the sidelines, where we were sitting.

We went with Wally Butts, the Georgia coach, and Tom Reeder, the sporting goods man. Wally's team defeated Temple in Philadelphia Friday night, but he remained over the weekend to get a look at the Philadelphia Eagles, who have put in a couple of offensive plays he may adopt.

The train from Philadelphia was late and the game was a complete sellout, so it took a great deal of fast talking to get in the gate, and everyone knows that Southerners don't come by fast talking naturally.

More conversation finally got us perched atop an equipment trunk in the rear of the Navy bench, a point from which one realizes by observation that football is an extremely rough game.

Getting back to the scouting report, Columbia won the game, 23-14, after trailing, 7-14, at half time. Mr. Lou Little, the Lion coach, did some real master-minding during the intermission and his team was 10 minutes late reporting for the second half.

This cost the Lions 15 yards on the kickoff and it looked as if these 15 yards were mighty important, as the Navy took that kickoff and marched down the field to the Columbia 10 before an offside penalty forced an attempted field goal, which was wide.

Then the Lions took the offensive for a touchdown late in the period and another and a field goal in the fourth for their victory.

Navy Big and Fast The Navy team is big, fast and versatile. It is sparked by Pistol Pete Williams, a rugged tailback who scored both Middle touchdowns. The last came on a beautiful 23-yard run after taking a shovel pass behind the line. But Williams isn't the only good back on the team. Others include Al McCully, Joe Bartos, Bill Hawkins and a novice named Bill Bartlett.

The Navy offense is patterned after the Missouri Split-T. It clicked well enough to gain 206 yards rushing and 121 passing against Columbia, regarded as one of the East's best teams. But, as Butts remarked, it's going to click better before the season is over.

The Middle defense gave up 276 yards rushing and four passing, to Columbia, but the Lions are going to gain on everybody, having one of the finest backfields in the country, headed by two great named Kussner and Yablonski, who scored all the Lions' touchdowns. However, it was only after an offside penalty on fourth down that they could crack the Navy. Boy, I sure suffered on this. The Middles have the talent and the manpower. They are going to be mighty tough by the time their game with Tech rolls around.

Butts and Little There were two other attractions besides Little in front of the Columbia bench and the other was the remarks of Butts about the play.

Little is, as they say, a sight. He walks up and down, yells to his players and officials on the field and screws his face into some of the darndest contortions you've ever seen.

He appears as if he's going to dash right on to the field at any moment, and one of his favorite acts is grasping his head between the palms of both hands and looking at the sky.

Butts enjoyed comparing his Georgia players to those of the Middles and Lions. His always finished third in a field of three. "Trouble with us," he would say, "is we're too little. . . . Look at these guys. . . . that big 71 would murder our scrappy back."

See that No. 40. . . . he was supposed to go to Alabama, but they got him away from Frank Thomas. . . . That was a good play, wasn't it? . . . I wish we had someone who could run with the ball like that. . . . If we had that big 71 we might be a pretty good football team. . . . Boy, I sure suffered on this field in 1942. . . . we should have won the game by four touchdowns, but when you come up here, it's something. . . . And he would go on and on and on.

Southeastern Normal It's nice to read in the papers that the football season in the Southeastern Conference settled down over the week end to a semblance of normalcy. There were no startling upsets, Alabama, Georgia, Tech, LSU, Tennessee and Kentucky all came through as expected.

The game next Friday night in Athens is going to wreck somebody's undefeated record with Kentucky clashes with Georgia. The Wildcats, who nosed out Kentucky Saturday, have been one of the big surprises of the conference and fans should get their first concrete basis on which to figure Georgia, a man or a mouse, this season.

Tech battles Ole Miss at Grant Field on Saturday and the Jackets will be favored. However, Ole Miss has a rugged defensive line, spearheaded by two of the best ends in the country, Ray Poole and H. A. Smith. It should be a good game.

Gaels Beat Alameda Air SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 6.—(AP)—The St. Mary's Gaels galloped to a 73-to-0 victory here today over a light and inexperienced Alameda Naval Air Station football team.

St. Mary's crew made its local debut and raced to three touchdowns in the first and second periods, two more in the third and three in the final.

The most spectacular play saw Night Hawkback Jack Verutti run 48 yards on the first play after the Gaels took the ball in the opening period.

Field Goal Wins for New York Giants, 17-14 PITTSBURGH, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Time ran out on the Pittsburgh Steelers today in a sensational last-half rally and the New York Giants eked out a 17-14 victory in a thrilling National Football League game before a shirt-sleeved throng of 33,702. Ken Strong's second-period field goal was the insurance the Giants needed to run off their victory and stop the previously unbeaten Steelers.

Los Angeles Triumphs SAN DIEGO, Cal., Oct. 6.—(AP)—The Los Angeles Bulldogs turned on the power in the second half to defeat San Diego's Bombers, 21 to 7, here today.

Canisius Wins, 31-0 BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 6.—(AP)—Canisius rolled to a 31 to 0 victory today over St. Mary's College of Winona, Wis.

MUSIAL ROARS INTO SECOND—Stan Musial, of the St. Louis Cardinals, doubles and has to slide to make it in the sixth inning of the first World Series game yesterday in St. Louis. The throw-in from right field is getting away from Red Sox Shortstop Johnny Pesky. Umpire Al Barlick watches. The hit scored a runner.

Powerful Texas Sets Pace

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—(UP)—The Texas Longhorns, whirling along at the rate of better than 57 points per game, moved to the front among the nation's undefeated football teams today as sectional leaders began to feel the strain.

Texas far and away was the most impressive team in action on the third big weekend of the 1946 campaign.

Army, king for two years, trounced Cornell, 46 to 21, on four touchdowns by Glenn Davis but the manner in which the Big Red pushed around Army reserves indicated again the Cadets are in for a rough siege.

Michigan, which meets Army in the Midwest this week, had its troubles before downing Iowa, 14 to 7; Alabama's attack spluttered in whipping South Carolina, 14 to 6, and even Notre Dame presented an unimpressive running attack until Johnny Lujack's passes started the Irish on their 33-to-0 conquest of Pittsburgh. UCLA continued its West Coast dominant role by defeating Washington, 39 to 13.

Army shared Saturday honors in the East with Columbia, which upset Navy, 23 to 14.

Oregon survived a 14-to-13 game with California and Washington State knocked off Idaho, 32 to 0, in Pacific Coast Conference games, but outside the league Southern California absorbed a 21-to-0 beating from Ohio State.

Headliners this week include: East—Columbia at Yale, Colgate at Cornell, Dartmouth at Pennsylvania, Harvard at Princeton, Temple at Pittsburgh, Villanova at Holy Cross.

Midwest—Army at Michigan, Illinois at Indiana, Minnesota at Northwestern, Ohio State at Wisconsin, Purdue at Notre Dame.

South—Kentucky at Georgia, Furman at South Carolina, Texas Christian at Miami, Florida at Vanderbilt, Mississippi at Georgia Tech, Rice at Tulane, Texas A. & M. at Louisiana State.

West—Oklahoma at Texas, Baylor at Arkansas, Southern California at Oregon State, Washington at Washington State and Stanford at UCLA.

Georgia, Kentucky Tilt Tops Southeast Card

By CHICK BOSCH

Associated Press Sports Writer. Georgia and Kentucky will tangle at Athens Friday night in the feature game of the Southeastern Conference football campaign this week. Games involving the Louisiana teams and Southwest Conference opponents also will lend spice to the program.

The complete program is the same as it was last week—three Conference games and six other members playing non-loop games. Heading the latter list is Tulane playing Rice at New Orleans, and Louisiana State meeting Texas A&M at Baton Rouge.

Another interconference game sends Mississippi State to Michigan State, while Auburn is host to St. Louis University at Birmingham. Alabama, still to show the power generally credited to the club, takes on Southwest Louisiana Institute at Tuscaloosa. Tennessee is host to Chattanooga.

Vanderbilt, winner over Mississippi Saturday, 7-0, faces Florida in Nashville; and Georgia Tech, a 32-6 victor over VMI, takes on Mississippi at Atlanta.

Louisiana State, by downing Mississippi State, 13-6, advanced to the No. 1 favorite's post for the Maroons are regarded as one of the South's most powerful aggregation. Fumbles marred that game.

Alabama, outplayed in every department by South Carolina, must be content with the No. 2 spot, behind LSU, until the Tide can turn in a performance worthy of a champion. Obviously, Coach Frank Thomas' club hasn't done that yet, despite three straight victories.

The Tide won from the Gamecocks, 14-6, coming from behind to do it. Last year, Alabama won by a 55-0 count.

Who Is Best, Musial, Ted? ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—(AP)—This forty-third World Series is supposed to settle many arguments over the relative merits of Stan Musial, the St. Louis Cardinal first baseman who led the majors in hitting with .365, and Ted Williams, the Boston Red Sox left fielder with a .342 mark.

There was little to choose between the pair today. Williams failed to figure on the attack in any of the three innings in which the American League champions scored in their 3-2 ten-inning victory.

However, Ted Williams, who says he made two $100 wagers that he will not be with the Red Sox next season, batted .333 today, getting one single in three official trips to the plate. He walked twice, Howie Pollet failing with his screwball with the count 3-2.

Richmond Rebels Win RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 6.—(AP)—The Richmond Rebels today defeated the Newport News Builders, 33-0.

B. Marian defeated Irwin Greenbaum 1-up on the twentieth hole.

Ernie Gessel Grabs Midget Race Crown CLEVELAND, Oct. 6.—(P)—Ernie Gessel, from Hollis, Long Island, won the 1946 National 100-Mile Midget Auto Race championship today in one hour 14 minutes and 43 seconds before 9,000 spectators at near-by Bainbridge Speedway track.

Dallas Wins 3d From Crackers

By F. M. WILLIAMS

Constitution Sports Writer

REBEL STADIUM, DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 6.—The roof fell in on Bill Ayers and the Atlanta Crackers in the eighth inning here today and the vain hopes of a Dixie Series championship went out the window as the Dallas Rebels won their third straight victory, 5 to 1, before a crowd of 10,881.

Ayers, whose hurling has been the ace of the Cracker staff all season, had a two-hitter and a 1-to-0 lead going into the eighth, but he brought about his own downfall by failing to cover first base on a bunt by Red Borom to start the frame and before he and Forrest Thompson could retire the side the Texans had five runs and a ball game.

Earl McGowan will oppose Hank Oana in the fourth game of the series Monday night and unless the Crackers come out of their batting slump, this will be the last of the series.

Sunday's tilt was a typical example of the pitiful offense the Southern League champions have put up since the Dixie opened.

They touched Tom Pullig for eight bingles but when the chips were down the big right-hander wrote his own ticket and he wrote it against the best batters the Crackers have.

They touched Tom Pullig for eight bingles but when the chips were down the big right-hander wrote his own ticket and he wrote it against the best batters the Crackers have.

GOODMAN DOUBLES Bill Goodman doubled in the first inning after Lloyd Gearhart had rolled out and scored on Babe Ellis' single, but that was the extent of the scoring effort in the fourth, Charles Glock and Frank Heller singled with only one away but Wes Hamner struck out and Red Mathis rolled feebly to short to end the threat. In the sixth, on away, Glock and Heller again hit successive singles but Hamner was a strike-out victim again.

The seventh was even worse. After Mathis had rolled out, Ayers singled and went to third when Clint Conaster dropped Lloyd Gearhart's fly. Goodman was purposely passed and then Ted Cieslak popped to first and Ellis rolled to second to leave the three men stranded.

Borom, an Atlanta boy, opened the Dallas half of the eighth with a bunt that Heller fielded but Ayers hesitated just long enough for the redhead to outrun him to first.

Pullig then sacrificed and Gene Markland hit a single to center to tie the count. Al Carr got a walk and Conaster hit another single that sent Markland racing across. Bob Moyer beat out an infield hit to load the bases and then Ayers walked Hal Hirschorn, forcing in Carr.

Thompson came in to relieve and was greeted with a single past second by Red Davis, scoring Conaster and Moyer and it was the ball game.

It was the supreme effort for the Crackers, won Sunday's game and they failed. There isn't much hope that Atlanta fans will see this winning aggregation again this season for the Rebels need only a victory tomorrow or Tuesday to wind up the season.

Redskins Slip Over 17-16 Win on Lions WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—(AP)—The Detroit Lions rallied for nine points in the last period today, but still were a point shy of a tie as the Washington Redskins slipped through to a shaky 17-16 National Football League victory.

TECH'S SECOND CLAIM TO FAME

Jacket Carries Tough Stinger; Punctures Bounding Pigskin

By JIMMY WALL

A slashing, smashing running back from Orville, Ala., captured the hearts of 25,000 sun-bathed fans at Grant Field Saturday, but Jim Nolan grabbed himself a place in Georgia Tech's Hall of Fame without carrying the ball a foot.

It was Pat McHugh who spurred the bogged-down Jacket running attack to new heights with his almost one-man march down the field for Tech's second score. But Jim Nolan was the big hero.

Late in the fourth quarter, Bob Thompson, 173-pound Kaydet back, who carried the VMI offensive on his shoulders all afternoon, dropped back to punt, the ball resting on his own 25. Big Jim, who towers six feet eight inches off the turf, broke through from his backup position, being Reserve Guard Frank Beall. Beall, who led a whole host of white-clad linemen, converged on Thompson and caught the kick, in his midriff.

The ball skittered away with both teams after it. But Big Jim got there first. He threw his 210-pound lanky frame on the ball and the pigskin, no match for the huge Jacket, gave up and went down, thoroughly deflated. Nolan hugged the ball until the pile up had been cleared, then stood up, a big smile on his grimy face, and held up the flat ball proudly for everyone to see. The crowd loved it.

This was the first time that a football had been flattened in a game since the historic 1928 Tech-California Rose Bowl classic, when Vance Maree turned the feat.

Jimmy Jordan, pocket-sized Tech back, was in the Kaydet backfield all day, and on one play the Birmingham bad skittered left end for 25 yards. Going down under a swarm of heavy Yakdets, the peppery little Jordan was up on his feet and bounced back to the huddle before his heavier adversaries could get up.

VMI put a brilliant goal-line defense in the closing minutes of the grueling contest, stopping three straight Tech line bucks in the shadow of the end zone. But Frank Broyles broke the hearts of the stout defenders and the few hundred Kaydet rooters in the East stand, by tossing a lobbing pass over the heads of the tense VMI linemen to Jimmy Castleberry for the score.

Bill Healey, who along with Capt. Davis and Ralph Slaton, was outstanding in the Tech line, made the best defensive play of the game after Tech's third touchdown, when he bowled over jerseyed Kaydets to nail the ball carrier almost in his tracks.

TERRY

SAY, MR. CHARLES, DID YOU HEAR ABOUT THAT AMERICAN EX-WAC JUMPING INTO THE RIVER AFTER THE DROWNING GIRL?

THEY SAY THE PILOT WHO SPOTTED THE RICH GIRL FLOATING DOWN THE RIVER, AND THE EX-WAC, ARE IN FOR BIG REWARDS...

I UNDERSTAND THE TWO GIRLS WERE BROUGHT HERE TO BE TREATED FOR EXPOSURE AND GIVEN SHOTS FOR TETANUS, TYPHOID AND THINGS THEY MIGHT HAVE PICKED UP IN THE WATER...

BY THE WAY, MR. CHARLES, WHY ARE YOU IN THE HOSPITAL?

TRACY JUST TALKED TO THE CHIEF OVER HIS WRIST RADIO. THE CHIEF SAYS GARGLES HAS A DINNER DATE WITH CHRISTMAS EARLY.

HE STOOD RIGHT BY THE WINDOW BOX WHEN HE TALKED. I HEARD HIM! SO CHRISTMAS EARLY IS A STOOOL, EHP?

WHY I'LL HAVE HER BUMPED OFF IF I NEVER GET OUT OF HERE! LET ME HAVE THAT PHONE.

SO YOU THOUGHT YOU'D PLAY DETECTIVE, EH, MELON-HEAD? RUNNING ALL OVER TOWN, SPENDING MARKED MONEY, THOSE SMART CROOKS SLIPPED INTO YOUR POCKET!

WHAT A PICTURE! YOU CHASING THE GOOSE-FACED GUY WHEN HE WAS HIDING IN YOUR MIRROR ALL THE TIME?
